Candu Pay-Offs Suspect - Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee suggested Monday that Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) payments in connection with two foreign Candu nuclear reactor sales were used for illegal or corrupt purposes.

The public accounts committee said it is left with that suspicion after conducting hearings into AECL sales of reactors in Argentina and South Korea.

It also stated that J. Lorne Gray, president of AECL when much of the negotiations were undertaken over agents and sales to the two countries, was a reluctant and unco-operative and evasive witness who had committed the people of Canada to immense expenditures for agents' fees without knowing what services would be rendered.

The sales involved payments of $2.5 million to an unidentified agent in the case of the Argentine sale and more than $15 million in fees and expenses to Shaul Eisenberg in connection with the Korean sale.

The report of the committee, which conducted 17 hearings last year said:

"The successful concealment, by complex and sophisticated payment and banking procedures in foreign countries, of the identities of the ultimate recipients of the funds and the nature of services rendered, leads your committee to suspect that some of the payments were indeed used for illegal or corrupt purposes."

The committee, made up of members of all parties and headed by a Conservative, also had this to say in a call for greater accountability to ministers by the Crown corporation:

—There is a question whether the AECL should be in the business of selling reactors and at any rate there must be a change in business practices;

—The government in the future must approve all contracts that expose the country to significant financial risks;

—There must be a code of ethics to include guidance on such things as paying agents;

FOOD UP 1.4%

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher prices for fresh fruit, pork and dairy products pushed the price of food up by 1.4 per cent in the four weeks ending Feb. 17. The Anti-Inflation Board's monthly survey also shows that food prices are up 10.9 per cent above levels of a year ago.

STICKLERS FOR STICKERS at the motor-vehicle testing station on McKenzie have sparked a rush that hasn't been experienced for months. Officials believe motorists started checking their inspection dates after recent newspaper stories about police lifting licence plates from cars which had gone past the one-year inspection period. ELDERLY HIT HARDEST

37,000 Facing Bus Strike Limbo

The shut down of B.C. Hydro bus service in Greater Victoria Wednesday for a one-day union "study session" means more than 37,000 regular bus users will be forced to find alternative transportation.

They'll have to drive a car, join a car pool or hitch-hike.

And while major employers anticipate the one-day strike will cause only a minor inconvenience for employees, the same does not apply to the elderly.

Buses in Vancouver and the Lower Mainland were not operating today as members of the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU) held their "study sessions."

Hydro's business offices are also affected as the ATU threw up picket lines which are being honored by members of the Office and Technical Employees Union (OTEU).

The trip to work became a great trek for many persons as they walked or hitch-hiked.

Others who don't normally drive to work brought in their cars, jamming the George Massey tunnel and bridges into the city area.

Lions Gate bridge was bumper-to-bumper, with cars backing up to Upper Levels and almost one kilometre along Marine Drive in North Vancouver.

Taxis were almost impossible to find.

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday he has no intention of intervening in the dispute.

He said he will leave the matter in the hands of the union and Hydro's management and expects an early settlement.

The 3,500 ATU members voted for a strike Nov. 17 and 18.

Hydro said in an application for an injunction that under provincial labor legislation, the union had three months from those dates in which strike action could be taken and the deadline had passed.

Ashton said, however, that the union kept the strike vote alive by instituting an overtime ban Feb. 17, the last day of the three-month period, at the Surrey transit centre where 170 of the system's 2,000 bus drivers work.

Hydro argued that an overtime ban by 170 Surrey bus drivers did not constitute a strike.

The board ruled Monday night, however, that the walkout is legal under the definition of the provincial labor code.

In Vancouver, a police spokesman said morning rush-hour traffic in the downtown area was heavier than usual but there were no major tie-ups.

In Victoria, some senior citizen groups are trying to arrange car pools but a shortage of volunteer drivers is making the task dificult, a spokesman for Silver Threads said.

GOURMET COOKING NOT TO THEIR TASTE

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — Prisoners at Scheveningen Jail rebelled when a new chef tried to give them French haute cuisine and they won.

Convicts at the Dutch prison, on the outskirts of The Hague, complained they were being fed French-style potatoes, venison and elaborate sauces.

They said they wanted meatballs, rissole and stew.

The prison governor accepted the majority verdict and ordered a return to the old weekly menu.

"It's all a question of taste," the governor said. "Farmer's stew obviously goes down better. With the majority of our customers, if it's something they don't know, they won't eat it."

Real GNP Growth Held Down to 2.6%

OTTAWA (CP) — A relatively-weak economic performance in the final three months of 1977 held down the real growth in the economy last year to 2.6 per cent, Statistics Canada reported today.

The 1977 growth rate was well below the long-term growth potential estimated at about five per cent. It compares with 4.9 per cent in 1976.

The growth rate in the final three months last year was only 3.2 per cent on an annual basis.

Statistics Canada said the economy was dominated in 1977 by the decline in the international value of the dollar, to about 89 cents U.S. from about $1.03 U.S. in November, 1976.

The devalued dollar means Canadian exports are cheaper abroad and imports are more expensive here.

Last year began strongly with revised real output of the economy growing by about 7.2 per cent, Statistics Canada said. But this was followed by a decline in output in the second quarter.

In the third three-month period, the economy expanded by about 5.3 per cent, followed by the relatively-sluggish growth of the final quarter.

Many private economists believe the long-term growth potential of the economy to be between four and five per cent, while federal officials are hoping for average growth of 5.5 per cent over the years to 1981.

However, the Canadian dollar firmed slightly against the U.S. dollar today with the news that Canada will likely do a sizeable portion of its foreign borrowing in the U.S.

In trading on the Montreal market at noon, the U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was down 1-25 at $1.1150. Pound sterling was down 1-5 at $2.1619.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 3-100 at $0.8968. Pound sterling was down 1-10 at $1.9390.

The firming came after Finance Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons Monday the government is borrowing $200 million U.S. from a special $1½ billion standby credit it set up with chartered banks last fall to protect the dollar's value.

Political opponents blasted him for issuing vague statements that may lead to continuing speculation against the dollar's value.

"Why can't he (Chretien) clear the air on what foreign borrowings are planned?" asked Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic. "Will they be massive such as $2 billion or $4 billion or nominal?"

Elsewhere in the world, the U.S. dollar moved sharply upward against major world currencies.

NEWS BRIEFS

Help Cost $100m

OTTAWA — Treasury Board president Robert Andras produced figures Monday indicating temporary hiring and consulting and contract services cost the government about $100 million last year.

Gas Hike Sought

OTTAWA — Half a dozen oil companies have asked the Anti-Inflation Board for permission to boost gasoline and other petroleum product prices by an average 0.5 cents a gallon, effective March 12. The increase would be in addition to the 2.3-cent-a-gallon increase scheduled for March 2.

$20m Expansion

CASTLEGAR (CP) — Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Monday a major lumber producer in British Columbia will announce a $20 million expansion program in the next few days.

CBC Adding 700

OTTAWA (CP) — Although the CBC will slow its rate of television station expansion in the coming fiscal year, it expects to add another 700 people to its staff, bringing the total to 12,222 by the end of March next year. See story Page 27.

Cubans Fighting?

ROME (AP) - Rebels battling for independence in Ethiopia's northern Eritrea province have been fighting Cuban soldiers for the first time, the insurgents have claimed. See story on Page 18.

Macdonald Resigns, 7 Seats Now Empty

OTTAWA (CP) — Former finance minister Donald Macdonald, a veteran of five cabinet posts, is resigning his seat in the House of Commons effective tomorrow, his office confirmed today.

His departure will leave seven seats vacant in the Commons and Prime Minister Trudeau must by law announce dates by Wednesday for by-elections in at least two of those seats.

But there is speculation that even if Trudeau announces dates for by-elections they will not be held. Many observers expect a general election to be held sometime this year, likely in the spring or early summer.

Macdonald, MP for Toronto's Rosedale riding, has already entered private law practice since leaving the onerous finance post last September.

The 45-year-old MP, who also served as minister of energy, mines and resources as well as defence and government house leader, was first elected to the Commons in 1962.

2 in Hoods Rob Store Of $200

Two hooded men with guns ordered a storekeeper to lie on the floor and fled with about $200 in View Royal Monday night.

Colwood RCMP said today they have no suspects in the armed holdup of View Royal Food Market, 246½ Island Highway.

Tony Lee, 27, said he was looking after the market for his uncle and was alone when the two men came in. "One of them said, 'Get up and get me the money quick'."

There was a revolver in one man's hand and the other pointed what appeared to be a rifle.

"One of them said, 'Keep it cool, man.' I told them that's what I was going to do — keep it cool," Lee said.

He said they wore rain jackets with hoods but no masks.

Hart Worked for RCMP Blais Confirms to MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais confirmed Monday that American Warren Hart worked for the RCMP security service.

But he denied that the RCMP ever ordered Hart to conduct electronic surveillance on then solicitor-general Warren Allmand and NDP MP John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt).

He said the MPs were bugged by accident and the tape of Allmand was destroyed.

Replying to questions in the Commons by Elmer MacKay (PC Central Nova), Blais admitted the RCMP security service had paid Hart for the work he did for them.

Last week MacKay tabled a sworn affidavit from Hart and other documents alleging the RCMP ordered Hart—an FBI informer who had worked undercover in the United States—to bug Allmand.

Hart said the RCMP thought Allmand was a Communist.

Blais told reporters Hart was what has been referred to as a source . . . charged with certain operations in order to provide certain information to the RCMP.

The bugging of Allmand, now consumer affairs minister, and Rodriguez was done accidentally while Hart was taping a conversation with another target. When the security service officers who were working with Hart discovered that Allmand had been taped without his knowledge, they destroyed the tape.

Blais said the officers felt this was all the corrective action necessary and one of his major concerns is why the RCMP did not tell Allmand or Prime Minister Trudeau that Allmand had been accidentally taped.

Gov't Easing In Estuary Row

The government moved Monday to pacify citizens' groups which have charged the environment ministry with trying to ram through land development policy for the Cowichan River estuary, but at the same time caught criticism on another flank.

Responding to complaints that this week's public hearing in Duncan is inadequate the government announced Monday that a second hearing has been scheduled for March 13.

The announcement won the government little respite, however, with the Sierra Club attacking the environment ministry for not allowing public input into all phases of impact assessment.

Sierra Club spokesman Bob Nixon said the environmental assessment procedures adopted by Environment Minister Jim Nielsen are inadequate because they do not involve the public.

Nixon also criticized the government for processing development applications from five companies before developing an over-all environmental management policy for the estuary.

Nixon said consideration of the applications should be halted until after a final estuary policy has been established and approved by cabinet.

The five companies that have submitted development applications are Western Energy, Doman Industries Ltd., Island Shake and Shingle, Hidden Valley Sawmills Ltd. and B.C. Forest Products.

A government spokesman said the environment ministry has not implied approval for the applications by processing them.

Sherrell Ban Politics-McGeer

SHERRELL
. . .shocked

The federal government's decision to refuse to give an immigration credit to Robbie Sherrell for his appointment as president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. was political, Education Minister Pat McGeer said today.

McGeer, the minister responsible for ICBC, said local immigration officials raised no particular problems when the appointment of Sherrell, an American, was first announced.

"So it's something being done by Immigration Minister Bud Cullen or by the federal cabinet for their own reasons and it was a political judgment on their part," McGeer said.

Asked what ICBC will do now, McGeer said he couldn't say.

"Maybe we should ask Mr. Cullen who should be president of ICBC. He's the one that seems to be making that decision."

McGeer refused to speculate when asked if he thought Sherrell would ever get the $80,000-a-year job.

The minister defended the actions of Price Waterhouse, the management consulting firm hired to find a new president, but refused to say if its short list of potential candidates included any Canadians.

McGeer said he does not know enough about federal immigration rules to say whether the decision on Sherrell will be appealed.

He said he has not talked to Sherrell since the federal decision was revealed.

In a letter, Cullen said he concluded that ICBC "did not conduct an adequate search of the Canadian labor market, including failure to consult with or seek the assistance of the employment and immigration commission."

Immigration spokesmen say if Sherrell has sufficient credits in other categories he may be allowed entry anyway.

Meanwhile, Sherrell says he is shocked to hear that he has been refused credit on immigration points for his appointment.

"You might consider me a person without a job at the moment," Sherrell said in a telephone interview from his home in Pullborough, Sussex, England.

The decision does not mean Sherrell has been refused entry to Canada, only that he will not receive credit under the immigration points system for having guaranteed employment.

Sherrell said he thought everything was ready for his trip to B.C. Thursday to take over as head of the Crown insurance corporation.

Sherrell said he quit his job with the Hartford Insurance Group. He and his wife had started shipping effects to Canada.

"I can only say I had approached the situation in good faith and that everyone else had, too — they had until this moment," said Sherrell. "I asked everyone I had been dealing with if there was any problem, and they said there was no serious problem."

He said Monday he has not heard from ICBC, Price Waterhouse or immigration officials about the refusal of credits.

Sherrell, 42, questioned whether the lack of credit would prevent him from qualifying as an immigrant if he fulfilled all other immigration requirements.

News of the ruling came when news media here obtained the contents of a letter to Premier Bill Bennett from Cullen.

Bennett said if Sherrell, is refused permission to emmigrate to B.C., then the ICBC board of directors will either have to appeal the federal immigration decision or hire a second choice.

He said he does not know if there were any Canadians on the short-list of candidates prepared by Price Waterhouse.

It is also up to the board of directors to decide if any attempt will be made to recover the fee Price Waterhouse charged to find Sherrell.

"I have full confidence in the directors' decisions, and if I didn't they would no longer be directors," said Bennett. "Now if there is any problems with their choice, that's between them and Manpower and Immigration."

"I'll wait. That's their decision. If the directors of ICBC come back with something else, then I'll deal with it."

Meanwhile, an ICBC spokesman said the board of directors would probably meet soon to discuss the situation but would not say what alternatives, if any, might be discussed.

THE OUTCASTS by Ben Wicks

Candu Pay-Off Suspect

—There must be a central government agency designed to monitor financial practices;

—Ross Campbell, who became head of AECL after Gray, hired Eisenberg without knowing what fees were to be paid him;

—AECL should suspend payment of fees to Eisenberg, president of United Development Inc., of Israel, until certain things are discovered, including whether payments are commensurate with services;

—AECL made an unwarranted interest payment of $132,000 to Eisenberg.

The Candu sold to Argentina now is being built by a consortium of AECL and Italiana Impianti of Italy. The sale of the reactor to South Korea was completed only last year.

Most recommendations of the committee have already been implemented, a spokesman for Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

The spokesman said Gillespie "had confidence in Campbell when he appointed him in early 1976 and still has that confidence."

Campbell was reported to be studying the committee report and would make no immediate comment on its recommendations.

The committee started investigation of the sales after disclosures in the 1976 report of Auditor-General J.J. Macdonell in 1976.

The committee said Parliament should ensure there must be parliamentary review before any corporation may alter the nature of its activities. It said AECL started life as a research agency and grew into a sales agency.

The corporation had not been prepared to take on the enormous commercial activities it had undertaken.

"The impression left with your committee was that AECL took unacceptable business risks due to confidence that further public funds would be available to the company in the event of difficulty."

It said the decision-making process vested too much power in Gray and "did not provide adequate safeguards to protect the public interest and its investment in AECL.

"AECL management did not follow acceptable business practices in the manner in which it made arrangements for the use of agents, nor did it have due regard for the high standard of business ethics which Crown corporations should observe."

"The payment of large unaccountable fees by the AECL management is totally unacceptale."

'Race Against Spring'

WARDENS GROVE, N.W.T. (CP) — Scientists and military personnel are racing against time to recover all the remaining debris of Cosmos 954 before spring.

Frank Horbath, an Atomic Energy Control Board of Canada (AECB) scientist, said Monday the weather is the single biggest frustration for the teams working to recover the remains of the nuclear-powered Soviet satellite.

The satellite re-entered the earth's atmosphere over the Northwest Territories Jan. 24, disintegrating in the process and spreading fragments over a wide area.

"Spring break-up is not that far off," Horbath said in an interview at the camp 1,500 kilometres northeast of Edmonton that was specially-constructed as headquarters for the search of the sparsely-populated wilderness area.

Known as Camp Garland, the tent city was built on a small pond dubbed Cosmos Lake near here. A large piece of the satellite was found imbedded in the ice of the nearby Thelon River at the height of search activity in late January.

Horbath said a scientific team was unable to fly to Area Four in the Wardens Grove area Monday because of poor weather conditions.

"I've learned a lot (about operating in extremely cold weather) since I came," said Horbath.

Meanwhile at the United Nations, Canada proposed Monday that a UN committee be set up to study the possibility of limiting nuclear power sources aboard spacecraft.

The proposal calls for the UN outer-space committee's scientific subcommittee to set up a special working group, open to all 47 member countries, on "questions relating to the uses of nuclear-power sources in outer space."

UNION PUSHING COAL PACT

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers officials, conceding they face a battle in winning ratification of a contract to end a coal strike, say they're prepared to spend an estimated $40,000 on television commercials promoting the pact.

And Johnny Paycheck, whose country songs are popular on coal-country radio stations, has been enlisted to make radio advertisements if leaders decide his name would be helpful.

Paycheck's latest record, ironically, is titled Take This Job and Shove It. It was the No. 38-selling single in the U.S. last week, said Variety, the entertainment trade weekly.

The half-dozen television commercials and the radio spots are planned for broadcast beginning Wednesday on nine television stations and 50 radio stations in 10 states.

The commercials reflect the union leadership's concern over persuading striking miners to ratify the contract and resume mining coal.

Nervous officials say they are counting on a "silent majority" to ratify the proposed agreement with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

The tentative contract calls for maximum wage increases of $2.40 an hour and provides guaranteed health and pension benefits.

But it also calls for the miners to pay a deductible amount for health care that has been free, includes company-run medical plans for most active miners and allows companies to fire wildcat strike leaders.

Union leader called about 250 UMW members together for an explanation of the proposed contract.

After the meeting, the group dispersed for home to explain the pact to the union membership.

Sinclair's $330,450 'a Bargain'

MONTREAL (CP) — At $330,450 a year, Ian Sinclair, chairman and chief executive officer of Canadian Pacific Ltd., was probably underpaid last year, a Montreal brokerage-house analyst said Monday.

Terrance Salman said Sinclair, whose earnings were disclosed by the Securities and Exchange Commission in the United States last week, is likely one of five to 10 of the highest-paid businessmen in Canada but is also one of the hardest working and most succesful.

What the competition pays is significant, but other important factors include tradition and company performance, Salman said.

Salman said Canadian Pacific, which earned nearly three-quarters of its 1976 profit from such non-rail activities as petroleum, steelmaking and mining, could not be compared with the federally-owned Canadian National Railways, where president Robert Bandeen earns about $80,000.

As a Crown corporation, CNR has an artificial ceiling on the salaries it can pay, Salman said.

He said the best comparison can be made with Union Pacific Corp., of New York, which earned $195 million in 1976 on total sales of $2 billion from rail, oil, gas, coal and woodlands operations.

Union Pacific chairman Frank Barnett earned $465,000 that year from salary and bonus alone. The company's president, James Evans, earned $407,000, and executive vice-president William Cook received $380,000.

The figures do not include income from stock options or directors' fees.

Squabble Over B.C. Taxes Snagging Pipe Project

OTTAWA (CP) — Failure in current negotiations with British Columbia on taxation of a northern pipeline could hamper financing of the $10 billion project, Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen said Monday.

But MacEachen, answering questions as a special Commons committee began detailed study of the pipeline legislation, said he still feels an agreement can be reached with the province.

The deputy prime minister would not go so far as to say lack of agreement would make the pipeline impossible to finance, but it was one of the issues financiers will consider before putting money into the massive project.

MacEachen steered clear of specifics on the negotiations with the province that started last summer for fear of prejudicing the talks.

However, he told the committee that generally they refer to protecting a clause in the agreement with the United States to bar discriminatory taxation of the pipeline—that is, ensuring it is subject only to taxes imposed on similar Canadian lines.

The negotiations were aimed at "helping the province achieve the highest possible benefits without violating the agreement on non-discrimination."

Late last week, the Commons gave approval-in-principle to the legislation, which ratifies an agreement with the U.S. to construct the line to move Alaskan natural gas to U.S. markets.

MPs expect a lengthy passage for the bill through the committee, with some anticipating it won't be referred back to the Commons until late in March.

Major opposition to the legislation has come from the New Democrats who want legislated guarantees for a minimum amount of Canadian content in both jobs and materials.

Although the Progressive Conservatives say they will urge some changes during committee study, they support the legislation.

Initially, the line will carry only gas from rich fields of Alaska's north slope to meet energy demands in the loawer 48 states. But provision has been made to later construct a connecting link from the MacKenzie delta to move Canadian gas through the same trunk line.

Jack Stabback, chairman of the National Energy Board, told committee members his regulatory agency feels the delta gas will be needed to fill domestic needs before 1990.

In its report last spring, the board predicted it would be needed between 1981 and 1985, but he said he could see a delay of a year or two beyond that because of new discoveries in Alberta.

SALARIES WITHIN GUIDELINES

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board approved a Canadian Pacific Ltd. pay plan that gave company chairman Ian Sinclair a salary increase of $3,650 last year, a board spokesman said Monday.

The increase gave Sinclair an annual salary of more than $330,000.

Canadian Pacific president F. S. Burbidge received a raise of $3,250 and vice-president Keith Campbell, $3,500. The increases raised their pay to $193,950 and $146,550 respectively.

The board spokesman said the salary increases had been considered by the board and found to be within anti-inflation guides.

Publish and Perish

The near-paranoid attitude of some members of the provincial cabinet towards "unauthorized" public statements by civil servants is almost frightening.

Poor Bill Ozard, who appeared otherwise to be eminently qualified for his job with Travel Minister Grace McCarthy's department, found out the hard way that one does not say anything, anywhere if it has not been approved by the minister herself — unless your signed letter of resignation is on her desk.

Ozard paid for a tiny classified ad in the Victoria newspapers thanking various local prominent citizens for helping him find employment here, one of them McCarthy. The position he filled was in no way a patronage job; he went through a civil service competition to get it.

But he perished when he published without the minister's approval. Ozard said the deputy minister told him "that in the ministry of travel no one commented on anything, no ne talked to the press, no one published anything without the express permission."

Is this state of affairs limited to the travel ministry, where the minister's penchant for taking personal credit for every good thing that happens is well-known?

In the companion department of recreation and conservation, evidence points to a similar gag order imposed from on high. Although that has not stopped some department employees, especially in the fish and wildlife branch, from speaking out, many now will not allow their names to be used.

A Vancouver Sun report quotes one senior biologist: "We've been told quite clearly that our jobs are in jeopardy if we talk to reporters."

They can't talk on the record to the press or public, it seems, if the matter is controversial or likely to embarrass the government. Which limits them to a very short list of topics press and public are likely to be interested in. How high can an eagle fly (answer: very) and how many eggs does a duck lay (answer: it depends) may be the only questions they can still answer without going into a Deep Throat routine.

To emphasize how unnecessary and stupid this policy is, look to the federal government which, goodness knows, is no paragon of freedom of information. But at least among civil servants who deal with environmental matters, Ottawa encourages openness.

"The Canadian Wildlife Service encourages its personnel to talk with the press," is the heading on an exhaustive list of CWS people, their special areas of expertise and the telephone numbers where they can be reached. The contact list is widely distributed in the news media.

A blanket no-comment rule like B.C.'s certainly makes things easy for the politicians, who are protected from reading in the papers suddenly one day of a budding environmental controversy, and from the tough questions in the legislature that such headlines always produce.

It's soothing and pleasant to be able to disclose only good news, and to cover up the failures and eco-catastrophes with thick layers of bumf.

But it is essentially political dishonesty, and a policy that leads to nasty explosions when things cannot be covered up any longer. Just the fact that something is considered confidential or secret in government circles (when it may just be embarrassing) makes the press that much more eager to ferret it out and to give it big black headlines when it does.

The gag rule only discredits politicians, makes liars and sneaks out of honest government employees and keeps the public in the dark. It is a stupid order and should be rescinded.

The Arnett Affair

The key point in the John Arnett affair is not that Arnett, officially press secretary to the premier, did a little political work for that premier, helping his constituency secretary to put out a flashy, strictly partisan sheet called Your MLA Reports.

Cabinet appointees who work out of ministers' offices often do a little political work on the side; indeed some of them, usually named executive or administrative assistants, do little else. While some taxpayers may quibble about this use of their money (and they undoubtedly have some arguable reasons for doing so), it is part of today's political process, generally grumblingly accepted as inevitable.

The difference in the Arnett affair is the contrast between Arnett's actions and his previous words. When Arnett was first appointed to the job, he made much of the fact that, even while being appointed through a cabinet order, he would maintain his civil service status. There was the clear implication that he would also maintain the non-partisan behavior of the civil servant — and that certainly doesn't include helping to put out MLAs' constituency newsletters on government time.

Throughout his tenure, Arnett has continued to maintain that he is impartial, self-righteously refusing to attend Social Credit party conventions, for example. But given the statements of Bennett's constituency secretary, it is hard to believe in that stand any longer. Moreover, Arnett hasn't helped himself one bit by refusing to answer any questions dealing with the issue. It's impossible not to think that if there was a reasonable explanation, he'd have given it by now.

The credibility of Bennett's office has been noticeably damaged, not by the fact that Arnett did the work, but by the fact that he did it while maintaining steadfastly that he wasn't doing anything like that at all.

RICHARD GWYN

Levesque's No Longer Alone

MONTREAL — From the outside the Chateau Champlain Hotel, because of its half-moon windows, looks a bit like a cheese-grater. Inside, it is distinctly grand, certainly up there in the 35th-storey, wood-panelled, $450-a-day royal suite, where the provincial premiers gathered.

Impishly, Quebec's Rene Levesque drew Ontario's Bill Davis over to the window. "One day," said Levesque, pointing down at the hulk of the Sun Life Insurance head office building below, "all of that will be yours."

Davis, who isn't quick with a quip, muttered a reply. The other premiers grinned and relaxed. It was going to be okay. Levesque ("The truth is he doesn't scare us any more," one premier told me), was acting less and less like some separation-crazed bogeyman, and more and more like just another, bantering, member of the provincial premiers' club. Confederation was going to be, if not saved, then at least given a decent chance to muddle through.

No Details

The actual communique that the premiers agreed to, seldom rose above the level of the blah. They promised to "make their best efforts" to provide minority-language education to which everyone "is entitled."

The premiers, though, rejected a proposal, by Quebec, Ontario and New Brunswick, to provide minority-language instruction wherever a class of at least 20 students could be assembled. They struck out any reference to second-language education (i.e. French taught to English-speaking students). They changed the description in their draft communique of minority-language education as "a basic right" to the blander "is entitled."

The premiers still did a great deal. They did agree to agree, unlike their St. Andrew's, N.B. meeting last summer where the group divided between Quebec and the rest. They did begin to extract the tension from the bilingualism issue.

The central fact, as shown by a report to the premiers from their education ministers, is that bilingualism is actually beginning to work. The Quebecers expressed surprise (why they should have been so ill-informed is a good question) at the extent of French education now available in the rest of the country.

Manitoba is a good case example. Until 1967, Manitoba law specifically made English the sole language of education. Today, almost all Franco-Manitobans can study in French 100 per cent of the time (some choose not to do so) right through university. In Alberta, where there are only 45,000 widely dispersed francophones, 6,300 students now are studying French up to university level.

BILL DAVIS
... Sun Life all his one day

To have finally found common educational ground with Quebec represented a considerable accomplishment for the English-speaking premiers. Think how often education has torn us apart — the Manitoba schools question, Ontario's Regulation 17, Quebec's Bill 101. If education no longer really divides us, then what remains to the national unity issue? Perhaps not a great deal more than misunderstanding, misinformation and a personal quarrel between Rene Levesque and Pierre Elliot Trudeau, who anyway are seeking the same goal in different ways.

To get what they did, however, the English-speaking premiers had to give up a lot. Without really intending to do it, they came close to endorsing Levesque's vision of Canada as an economic association of almost-sovereign states.

While all Canadians now are "entitled" to education in the language of their choice, each province has the "exclusive jurisdiction" to determine how that entitlement may be exercised. The premiers therefore now accept Levesque's right to limit the educational rights of Quebec anglophones. (The same day the premiers assembled, the Greater Montreal Protestant school board announced that for lack of students it would close five schools.)

Moved Ahead

The premiers moved ahead from St. Andrew's by moving onto Levesque's side. Five other premiers, for example, this time backed Levesque's argument that language rights should not be enshrined in a pan-Canadian constitutional guarantee, as Trudeau has proposed. Instead, they bought Levesque's argument that each province should deal with its own citizens as it sees fit.

The devolution of Canada from country to a loose Confederation of quasi-sovereign states thus has been speeded up. To emphasize their new status as an alternative national government, the premiers agreed at Montreal to establish their own permanent secretariat.

More bureaucrats matter little, fewer flags do. At Montreal, for the first time at any meeting of provincial premiers since they began in the mid-1960s, no maple leaf flag was in sight. Only the red, blue, gold, white and green standards of the provinces.

For almost a century after Confederation, Canada stood alone as the only country in the world without a flag of its own. Just 12 years later we again stand alone — as the only country in the world with 11 national flags, or perhaps 10. This, rather than French vs. English, may be the real challenge that Confederation now is going to have to muddle through.

Lunatic Policy

I have written a letter of complaint to the minister of health concerning a recent stay in the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The number of beds in the Jubilee that are occupied by chronically ill patients is excessive and consequently deplorable.

On Jan. 23 I broke my leg in a skiing accident and was required to spend a few days in the Jubilee Hospital. It was impossible for me to remain there as long as my doctor wished because of the chronically ill and senile patients in the ward with me. I was in a six-bed ward where four of the beds were occupied by senile men who were well over 80 who sat in wheel chairs during the day babbling, spitting up their food, urinating on the floor, having bowel movements in portable commmodes in the room and generally creating an atmosphere of One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest.

These people certainly require care and a great deal of it, but surely not in an acute care hospital.

It is totally unfair for an injured person to be admitted to this hospital and then to find that he must share a small room with four or five mentally deranged lunatics who carry on in a totally unacceptable manner.

I would suggest that these types of patients be isolated in one section of the hospital, or that other chronic care facilities be created where appropriate care can be administered to these older people.

Unless something is done, the 200 chronically ill people presently in private homes in the city will be occupying one-third of the proposed beds in the new Helmcken Road hospital, a very upetting thought indeed. — B.M. Lusk, 1210 Old Esquimalt Road.

Wit for Nitwits

In a recent commentary on the Bastion theatre a writer quoted a saying from his father "s - - - without wit is only for a nitwit." That seems to sum up the reaction of a number of patrons (said to be almost 200 in one evening) who walked out of the McPherson Theatre in protest of the production Comedians.

The man after whom the theatre was named led a frugal life, and a friend of his told me the old man complained when the price of toilet paper went up a cent. By market manipulation and self-sacrifice he amassed a fortune which he left to the city and his fellow citizens. A good part of his $5½ million went to build the theatre in Centennial Square.

In this permissive age and this latest turn of events in this notorious Bastion production, one wonders if the old man is turning over in his grave in shame and shock.

We missed what is usually a good evening's entertainment by tearing up our tickets by the fire at home. Victorians are not nitwits and we were led to like Bastion productions by the high standard set by my friend Peter Mannering who started it all. Is some nitwit of a producer now trying to trade us down the river? — Clarence Goode, 4690 Cordova Bay Road.

McGill's Grants

A report (Jan. 14) of remarks made about education grants by Education Minister Dr. Pat McGeer must have misled and confused your readers. This report included comments on the financing of second language education which mentioned federal grants affecting McGill University and which we would therefore like to clarify.

In particular we would like to point out that federal grants for operating costs in education are all paid to provincial governments under agreements signed by those governments. Neither McGill nor, for example, the University of Victoria receives any such payments from Ottawa. It is therefore wrong for Dr. McGeer to say that "McGill University gets about $9 million simply because it is in Quebec." Nothing goes to McGill. The federal contributions are contractually paid to the Quebec and other provincial governments and are based on "the operating grants paid by the provinces to their minority official language post-secondary institutions".

Like universities right across Canada, the funding McGill gets for its students comes from the regular operating grant it receives from the government of the province in which it is located. — Andrew Allen, Director, Information Office, McGill University, Montreal.

A Few Pet Hates

How about starting a pet aversions section in your letters space? You might begin with these of mine:

1. The saccharine falsity of the "take care . . . have a good day" school of media announcers.

2. Interviewers who interrupt their guests.

3. The atrocious incompetence of people in public office in using the English language. For example, the omnipresent unfinished sentence.

4. The 80 per cent of drivers of large trucks who go 15 m.p.h. above the speed limit on a regular basis.

5. Media sensationalism, especially in stories of hostage-taking and crimes of violence.

6. Media reiterations. The same story repeated for days and weeks on end, ad nauseam. CBC "technical difficulties."

7. The extreme discourtesy and insensitivity of many Vancouver city bus drivers.

8. Our smug, overpaid, cumbersome and ineffective civil service.

9. The air of superiority assumed by clerks in the better women's clothing shops. — P. Palmer, Victoria.

Positive Step

It is our understanding that the B.C. position at the recent first minister's conference with regard to massive development projects was to reject these types of projects, hydroelectric in particular. Premier Bill Bennett said such projects are not an answer to economic and unemployment problems.

On behalf of the Sierra Club of western Canada, I wish to congratulate this stand.

A wide spectrum of public interest organizations believe that massive development projects for electrical generation, be they hydro, coal or nuclear, are significant contributors to modern social, environmental and economic problems in Canada, including unemployment.

It is our hope that the B.C. government will translate the position which it has taken at the first minister's conference into constructive action during the upcoming session of the British Columbia legislature. The recently appointed all-party committee on Crown corporations offers an excellent opportunity to review the role of B.C. Hydro in meeting provincial energy needs consistent with the preservtion of environmental quality, human health and long-term employment stability in the energy field.

I urge the government also to integrate the planning and approval of electric power projects with a broad energy review process such as offered by the B.C. energy commission. The stand at the first minister's conference is a positive step which seems to imply an awareness that serious energy planning in British Columbia can no longer be delayed. — Robert W. Nixon, Regional Conservation Representative, Sierra Club, 1645 Broadmead Avenue.

Paid for It

As a superannuated public servant I should like to draw attention to the remarks of R. W. Ball in a letter to the editor of Feb. 16 (Ask Candidates) concerning our indexed pensions.

For many years I paid 5½ to 6½ per cent of my salary into the pension fund plus one per cent to have it indexed.

The government had this money interest-free for these years. I am sure it provided money to help finance federal-provincial programs to the benefit of all taxpayers.

Also many public servants die near the end of their working years or just after retiring. Female contributors' estates benefit by receiving their contributions plus very low interest. Widows get 50 per cent of their husbands' pensions, all this to the advantage of the public purse.

I do not feel the taxpayer has paid one cent toward public service indexed pensions. — Frances Hopper, 711-450 Simcoe Street.

Three Rs

In her recent address to the region's teachers Dr. Margaret Fulton stressed the fact that basic English usage was fundamental to all school subjects, then went on to say: "Science and technology, as seen in mini-calculators, for instance, have made old-style teaching methods and drilling students in the three Rs nonsense" (Feb. 23).

Do modern kids soak up knowledge by osmosis?

Do computers and calculators divine our needs and, unaided, spew forth facts and figures?

Genius is rare. So, just as top pianists and ballet dancers endure years of daily practice before they soar to the heights, so too must immature intellects endure years of nurturing, training and discipline before they acquire the easy fluency in the three Rs necessary to comprehend fully what they read, to express their thoughts clearly and concisely, to appreciate prose, poetry and the arts and to use computers and calculators intelligently.

Judging by some of the university level exam results published lately, it seems that far more of that old-fashioned drilling in the three Rs is needed. — Ruby A. Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Flying Socreds

If there was anyone ever doubted that the Socred-minded were not only on the fringe, but practising lunatics, surely the remotest suggestion that Flying Phil lead the party should remove any lingering doubts!

Can anyone imagine what Canada would be like with this flamboyant egomaniac in power?

If you want sanity, humanity, honest people and honest government stick to the NDP like glue! — P. Simpson, 2536 Forbes Street.

Sex Equality Lags in U.K.

By ROBERT TAYLOR
London Observer

Britain's Equal Opportunities Commission, established just two years ago by law to fight sex discrimination, is under fire from a growing number of critics who believe it is failing to make any impact.

Certainly Britain has a long way to go before there is real equality between men and women.

By comparison with the rest of Western Europe and the United States, the country has made little relative progress towards equal pay. The wages of women workers amount to only 66 per cent of the male's average hourly earnings, which is the worst in the industrialized West.

Promotional chances for women who want to make a career in their work remain very poor, and there are enormous obstacles of popular prejudice to overcome.

Even in simple matters like negotiating a bank loan or filling in a tax form, there is one law for men, another for women. Throughout industry and the civil service women find it more difficult to get ahead.

The Equal Opportunities Commission took a sober view of its chances of making a breakthrough in social attitudes in its first annual report.

It reached the conclusion that it would not serve the public interest to give the impression that "this ancient form of inequality can be remedied overnight with a few, spectacular strokes."

But women are now a vital part of the work force in Britain. More and more married women are returning to work after having their babies. The growth in white collar employment has provided many more job opportunities. Nearly half of all women aged 15 and over now work, even if many do so for only a few hours a week. Almost the entire labor force in sectors like clerical and retail distribution is now made up of women, and they account for over three-quarters of all workers in catering, cleaning and hairdressing.

Many members of Parliament, lawyers and women militants believe that the commission, supposed to speed up the change in social attitudes to women, is ineffective. It has an annual budget of $3 million and a staff of 120 but, say its critics, it has simply failed to make any impression on the problems.

The 15 part-time commissioners, from both sides of industry and other areas of public life, are accused of over-caution and lethargy.

Roy Jenkins, who as home secretary piloted the Sex Discrimination Bill through Parliament in 1975, assured MPs that the commission had been given "the responsibility and the powers to enfore the law in the public interest."

It has the power to launch formal investigations into alleged sex discrimination, but only two such investigations have taken place. The deputy chairman, Lady Howe, tells me that the commission intends to have five such investigations a year.

As one senior lawyer asked, "Are we to believe that there is not a single company (or trade union) in Britain which is systematically discriminating, directly or indirectly, on grounds of sex in any sense covered by the act?"

The commission has the right to issue a non-discrimination notice against anybody who is found to be practising discrimination against either sex. But not one has so far been issued, though the government believes such notices are essential in the battle against sex discrimination.

Parliament also gave the commission the power to act against those who issued instructions to discriminate, but again no action has so far followed.

Legal assistance has only been provided to 53 individuals to fight their complaints through an industrial tribunal. The proportion of cases taken up is far lower than the one achieved by the Commission for Racial Equality, which has just started to work. There is still not even a code of practice of how people should behave to prevent discrimination on sex grounds, though one was promised by the chairman, Lady Lockwood.

JENKINS

All this suggests that the Equal Opportunities Commission wants a quiet life, preferring behind-the-scenes diplomacy and persuasion to change deeply rooted attitudes to a more militant and public campaign. There are few signs that suggest such a low-profile strategy is proving a success.

Many observers believe the commission faces the danger of failure — both as a legal enforcement agency and as a moral persuader.

In the United States the full force of the law has helped to transform male attitudes towards women. By contrast, in Sweden persuasion proved highly successful. The unhappy attempt in Britain to try to combine both approaches is satisfying nobody.

SMITH
. . . confidence lost

'Smith Should Resign'

THE SUN
An Editorial

The issue now is not whether the Speaker of the legislature, Ed Smith, should have given Barbara Pennock a job in his office. It is not whether she should have been raised 10 salary grades after five weeks' work. It is not whether Mr. Smith should have appointed Miss Pennock, who may or may not be politically partisan, to a position in the auditor-general's office. It is not whether Mr. Smith has been unjustly criticized for doing these things.

These are matters that had to be publicly debated. But the only issue now is whether Mr. Smith has outlived his usefulness as Speaker.

NDP Opposition leader Dave Barrett and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson have made it clear that Mr. Smith no longer has the confidence of opposition members.

But that's not all. The government which nominated and seconded his appointment has not come to his defence. In fact, the silence of Premier Bennett on the subject has been deafening. Mr. Smith has lost the confidence of both sides of the House.

Under the circumstances, submitting his resignaton is not just the honorable thing for Mr. Smith to do. It is the only practical thing to do.

The State Must Keep Hands off TV

By CLAUDE SARRAUTE
Le Monde, Paris

Recently retired veteran CBS commentator Eric Sevareid was fond of saying that what was important for an independent television was not to be impartial or accurate, but free. And how is the independence of so special a public service to be measured? Quite precisely by its president's independence — from the government. For in fact, it is the cabinet or a board partly nominated by the government which is most often responsible for appointing the presidents of television networks.

But the difference is that, contrary to what happens in France, nearly everywhere else permanent contracts, automatically renewable except in the case of serious lapses, keep a television network president in his job until retirement. A premature departure, either forced or induced, would give rise to such a public outcry in countries like, Holland, Switzerland, Sweden and Great Britain, in particular, that nobody has even dared to breach this unwritten rule. The whole thing is based on respect for a certain notion of democracy.

Distortions

It is a notion that is sometimes, unfortunately, rather too elastic and prone to quite a few distortions. Look at what is happening in Canada, a country where the public service is nowhere near having a monopoly of television; a country where viewers have a choice of up to 20 channels (some of them served by cable); a country traditionally attached to liberty; but a country whose Latin legacy and its attendant hothead intolerence appear to be weighing a trifle too heavily in the balance lately. Since Rene Levesque's election in November 1976 as premier of Quebec, to be precise.

That was enough to provoke Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and his minister of telecommunications, Jeanne Sauve, into a retaliatory fury. If Trudeau's former fellow schoolmate had won in Quebec, it was because of whom, because of what? The French-language network of the CBC, of course. And they curtly set up a commission to investigate the network's president, A. W. Johnson, a charming, sincere and disarmingly well-meaning man.

What exactly did the government hold against him? That his journalists were one-sided, that instead of being objective, they tilted in favor of the Parti Quebecois (separatist) and failed in their duty, which was to promote national unity. One could counter this by retorting that rooting for a unitary Canada would be pleading for the federalists. In any case, it was a bad case. The commission's report was hardly surprising considering that charges of this sort are hard to prove. How, indeed, can a report's neutrality be assessed in such a case?

The problem cropped up in 1957 in the Netherlands, where the main political and religious groups share time on the two networks on a pro-rata basis computed from the audience ratings of their various televised news services and the readership of various television weeklies. But who, you will say, is responsible for the news? That, precisely, is — or rather, was — the entire problem.

The notion prevailing at the time was that information could not, and should not, be impartial, as people everywhere had opinions on every subject, and it was therefore up to each society to voice its own ideas. It is something of the sort that the RAI (Italian State radio and television authority) has done by simply handing the second channel's news service over to the opposition.

The trouble is that a TV news service requires vast financial and technical resources. In the Netherlands, where revenue from licencing fees and advertising is redistributed in proportion to the TV time allotted each group, the smaller ones find themselves disadvantaged compared with their bigger fellows. Hence the decision made 20 years ago to hand over responsibility for running the three daily newscasts and the longer backgrounder programs — plus sports, which was thrown in as well — to a public department called NOS, set up for the purpose.

Come Long Way

Immediately there was a return to the idea of objectivity which was so hotly contested earlier. At the beginning, each program lasted only 15 minutes. Every program was, of course, closely monitored and expected to accommodate all points of view, even if there were 15 of them. Holland has come a long way, a very long way, now from such stopwatch monitoring. Though politicians of every shade turned up their noses at the idea at first, bit by bit they have all come round to recognizing that impartiality cannot be judged on the basis of an evening, an hour, a week, a month or even a year. Impartiality merely requires the groups in the news to be included in telecast news summaries. It is up to the news desk to decide the order in which they are mentioned and how often.

Ah well, you might say, in this scramble to get on the box, it is the ruling party or parties that will always have the better of the opposition. To rule is to act, to create the event. True. All the same, in Holland the ministers make it a point to respect the rules. They have no more privileges — and this applies equally well to the prime minister — than any other politician.

When you come down to it, the independence of a television service is also determined by the prevailing mood of the public, by the degree of its tolerance and concern. In West Germany, people — and by that is meant the vast majority of a public traumatized by its past — would not stand for a Communist or a Nazi going on television to take part in a discussion or forum outside the strict time slots allowed their parties during an election campaign, which is the one and only time they are allowed on television. The British, on the other hand, are very fair. They have given Enoch Powell, the leader of an especially virulent far Right, a chance — which he grabbed with both hands — to become a political star.

Propaganda

And the French — this is their problem, a problem related to the absence of data for making comparisons — still find it perfectly normal to allow those who are governing them to quite simply hijack this public service and deflect it from its mission, occasionally turning it into an insidious instrument of propaganda.

Fear at Top of the Heap

russell baker

Dr. Leon Tec believes most people "do not fear failure as much as we do success." I quote not from Dr. Tec's new paperback book, The Fear of Success, but from the publisher's press release summing it up. With hundreds of new books being published daily, there isn't time to read any of them any more. You have to make do with the press releases.

Half these books deal with Success. Everybody is presumed to want Success, much as Christians of old wanted redemption and salvation. The press release for Dr. Tec's work states the assumption in prose worthy of Harold Robbins. Thus: "Success & everybody craves it, works for it, some even fight and cheat for it — yet few ever reach its dizzying heights."

* * *

The reason, according to Dr. Tec's press release, is a "universal fear of success" which is "often ingrained in us since childhood." His book, I gather, will help you measure your "fear-of-success quotient" and identify the problems to be surmounted so those dizzying heights can be scaled.

All this seems a bit too simple. Since moving from Washington to Manhattan, I have been surrounded by Successes. It gives you no encouragement to join the club. A big drawback is that after you become a Success in New York, there are only two living alternatives. You can plunge ahead and become a Failure, or you can sit around idly and become a Has Been.

In Washington nobody wanted to become a Success, except for a few hostesses. People there wanted to get reelected, or pull a great swindle, or bomb the bejeebers out of five or six places, according to their ambition.

In Washington people wanted to succeed at something so they would gain the wherewithal to succeed at something even bigger. The New York idea that Success is a static condition which lends social cachet to the initiate, like being tapped for Skull and Bones or getting a guest shot on Johnny Carson, would have struck those Washingtonians as ridiculous. They were interested in doing things, not in having their names printed in bold type in the gossip columns.

I do not mean to slur New York Successes with the implication that they never do anything. Quite a few do, and it speaks well of them, because being a success in the New York sense is a grueling, full-time job, which leaves little time, energy and imagination to succeed at anything else.

They have to dress like Successes, decorate like Successes, eat where Successes eat, carry briefcases like Successes carry, joke like Successes joke, be talked about like Successes are talked about, and party like Successes party. This means they have to go to "power parties" — the only kind of party Successes can attend without losing face — and watch aging Literary Successes throw punches at each other.

* * *

All this obviously exhausts a lot of resources that would otherwise be applied to succeeding at something difficult, such as doing a hard job well or manoeuvring from adolescence to grizzled dignity with grace and minimal catastrophe.

In Washington, none of these difficulties exist. There a man may wear a prison-issue suit, live with rented furniture, be snubbed by headwaiters, skirt parties like bogs, carry his papers in an umbrella and still swing enough clout to give ulcers to half the population.

This is because he does not have to bother about being a Success. Not having to act like a Success, he is unencoumbered by trifles hobbling his attempts to succeed at difficult projects. In fact, people in Washington who start acting like Successes are likely to be suspected of being frauds, if not crooks. (Unless, of course, they are hostesses.)

* * *

In Los Angeles you are what you drive. In Washngton you are what you do. In New York you are what you act. These rules of American life make it hardest on the New Yorker. The successful person in Los Angeles has only to drive a Mercedes or Rolls-Royce as a concession to his talent. In Washington, he has only to apply himself.

In New York, however, he has to act the way Successes act, which can be such a demanding task that he may have little left over for succeeding at anything, except of course at being a Success. In New York at least, Dr. Tec's "fear of success' is an idea that seems wide of the mark. More likely it is not fear at all that keeps the Success Corps small, but only a sensible suspicion that if you're not careful about avoiding Success you'll never get time or energy to do all those hard, good things you'd like to do very well

After years of paying rent, what have you got?

You've probably got lots of cancelled rent cheques. In fact, the closest you are to owning your own home is perhaps building a paper one. Think about it. Because with a Home Ownership Savings Plan you could be laying down the foundation for a real home, and saving on your income tax at the same time. Here's how it works.

A Home Ownership Savings Plan allows you to save up to $1,000 per year ($2,000 a year for a couple who are both income-earning), which could result in a couple saving up to $20,000, tax-free. Your contributions can be invested in one or a combination of three savings options detailed here.

1. Royal Bank HOSP Deposits. These are interest bearing deposits whose longterm nature make it possible to earn a higher rate of interest than on conventional savings deposits.

2. Income Fund. Here your contributions are used to purchase high yield bonds, deposit instruments and mortgages insured under the National Housing Act. This fund is actively managed on your behalf by professionals with the objective of maximizing income, while maintaining reasonable price stability and moderate capital appreciation.

3. Equity Fund. The objective of this fund is long term capital growth and reasonable income. Your contributions are invested mainly in the shares of Canadian companies. Again, the investment portfolio is managed by the same professionals managing the Income Fund.

CROWN SALE OF LOTS APPROVED

The provincial government said Monday it has approved the sale of 757 Crown lots held under long-term leases throughout the province.

The government said an independent appraiser will establish the market value of the lots, which then will be offered for sale to the current leaseholders, who will have the option to continue under the current arrangement.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said almost all of the lots are residential. He said the offer is part of the government's policy of helping British Columbians own their own homes.

Pharmacare Suspends 3 Vancouver Pharmacies

Three Vancouver pharmacies have been suspended from the provincial pharmacare scheme, program director Pat Tidball said Monday.

Investigations are still being carried out in the Victoria area but so far no irregularities as serious as the those in Vancouver have been uncovered.

Victoria area Pharmacare administrator Nerys Hughes said random audits of local pharmacies have discovered the occasional incident of drugs being over-priced, but such cases have been rectified with a warning.

Tidball said Centennial Drugstore and two Tech Drug Marts were suspended because of possible abuse of the government program.

The irregularities have to be serious before a Pharmacare contract is cancelled, Tidball said, because such a move could virtually sentence a pharmacy to bankruptcy.

About 50 to 60 per cent of a the average pharmacy's dispensing is for Pharmacare though in Victoria the percentage runs in some cases as high as 75 per cent.

Tidball said RCMP have seized records from the Vancouver stores and it will be up to the police to decide if further action is warranted.

He said his department will continue to investigate frauds within the program and will eventually conduct audits of all drugstores throughout the province.

Pharmacies cannot charge more than they pay for drugs. Their only profit is on the dispensing fee.

The average prescription costs $6.50 of which half is drug cost and half dispensing fee.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said in November that about five per cent of the province's 520 pharmacies had been found to be violating their agreements with the government under the scheme.

Vander Zalm said some pharmacists were adding unnecessary surcharges and dispensing fees, or were simply charging more for drugs than they were supposed to.

Trustees Reject PIE Bill

An educational bill of rights drawn up by a Vancouver parent group didn't get far Monday with the Greater Victoria school board.

Trustees refused support for a document from a group called Parents Interested in Education (PIE), and instead questioned the status of the organization.

Experimental programs such as sex education and counselling at the elementary level may threaten the basic individual rights of parents and children, PIE said in a letter to the board.

The bill of rights was drawn up as protection against some of the more experimental and questionable practices taking place schools, the letter said.

It said transactional analysis and behavior modification techniques are being given in group therapy under the guise of communications skills courses.

The letter also mentioned psychiatric drugs being given to hyperactive children.

Parent rights would include access to all information on their children, written details of all programs, the right to refuse involvement in any program and communication with teachers working with their children, according to a draft of the bill.

It also called for safeguards to protect children from physical, intellectual and emotional abuse and an appeal route for what they consider unsatisfactory decisions.

$800 Damage from Smoking

Smoking caused an estimated $800 damage to a View Street apartment Monday.

Firemen found a burning chesterfield seat had been carried outside by the occupant at 1138 View.

TUG GROUNDED

The 92-foot coastal tug Glendale grounded off the south coast of St. Ines Island in the Barkley Sound area Monday while assisting in supervision of the herring roe fishery.

Search and rescue spokesmen said there was some damage to the tug, but that flooding has been brought under control. No one was injured.

The spokesman said the reason for the grounding is not known, but that an investigation has begun. Canadian Coast Guard vessels and the destroyer Qu'Appelle were sent to the area on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The tug was supervising fishing boats heading to the fishing grounds. The herring roe season is expected to be declared open this week.

Zero-Base Budgets Planned By Wolfe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Zero-base budgeting (ZBB) will be introduced in the 1979-80 fiscal year for three provincial government ministries, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Monday.

"We haven't decided which departments will be selected," he said at a news conference. "They will have to be departments that fully accept the ZBB concept at the ministerial level, and in which there is sufficient diversity of spending."

ZBB is a budgeting method that requires the justification of all expenses according to priority, rather than simply taking the previous year's budget and adding new expenses.

Its developer, Peter Pyhrr, a United States business consultant, has described it as a management process that forces an organization to re-evaluate its activities and operations and re-establish its priorities.

Wolfe said the ZBB research will be directed by John Kelly, a chartered accountant who is director of the provincial treasury board staff.

Mayhew Confident On TV Series

Production of a 65-episode TV soap opera could start in Victoria this spring if financial backers for the proposal like a pilot film to be shot in Vancouver in two or three weeks.

Victoria economic development commissioner Barry Mayhew said today he has held discussions with the film company that's trying to get the series off the ground.

"I feel really confident that this thing will fly."

Mayhew said television and film proposals are notorious for not coming off.

But when I talked to them I tried to pin them down and they felt very confident — 80 per cent sure."

He said the project could mean hundreds of thousands of dollars for the city's economy.

"They spend $5,000 a day when they're shooting . . . it would be an important economic infusion because that's new money in the community."

Mayhew said the project is backed by a Canadian company that wishes to remain anonymous.

About 20 to 25 people would be involved in the making of the series and all but the lead roles would go to Canadians. Mayhew said the stars would probably be American.

He said the show would be sold to about 200 independent U.S. TV stations but it is not known whether Canadian television would also be buying.

Mayhew said he was first approached by the film company about six weeks ago when it wanted to know if the city would have any objections to the use of public places in Victoria for filming purposes.

He said city hall has indicated there would be no problems as long as the television production didn't disrupt traffic.

Mayhew said he has located possible studio space for the film company and hopes to see it in use by mid-April at the latest.

HOLIDAY DELAYS MEETING ON SMITH

If a meeting is to be held with opposition leaders over Speaker Ed Smith's hiring of his former secretary and girlfriend for a job in the auditor-general's department, it won't be until after Premier Bill Bennett returns from vacation.

Bennett said since the opposition leaders decided to make their feelings known publicly, he wonders if a meeting now would serve any purpose.

Cent-a-Head Grant Veto

A request by the B.C. Council for the Family for a $67.32 grant was turned down by Sidney council Monday.

Only Ald. Peter Grant voted in favor of the grant, an amount equal to one cent for each person in Sidney.

In other business, Peter Sugden, 9573 Epco Road, told council he is concerned about traffic on roads adjoining a proposed mobile home park in Sidney.

The proposed 249-lot development of Leisure Villa Estates was approved in principle by council last week. It will include a swimming pool and a parking lot for at least 100 recreation vehicles.

Acting Mayor James Lang said Sugden's concerns are premature and assured him that traffic considerations will be taken into account when development plans are submitted to council.

Disasters In U.S. Spur B.C. Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — A review of British Columbia's emergency firefighting programs is being considered in the wake of two recent United States rail disasters which killed 20 people, Ken Collier, B.C.'s deputy provincial fire marshal said Monday.

Collier said such a review might lead to an upgrading of existing emergency equipment and facilities on B.C. rail lines. He said the province is facing an increase in the movement of toxic and flammable gasses and chemicals.

In 1973, the fire marshal's office and rail and petroleum companies established disaster-kits at Prince George, Kamloops, Nelson and Vancouver.

An emergency system was set up to move the kits and the necessary experts to a disaster scene as quickly as possible.

The kits, costing about $3,500 each, contain saftey gear, non-sparking tools, specialized couplings, valves, fittings and flexible reinforced hoses to transfer liquids from damaged rail cars.

"The review may also lead to an extension of the system to highways which realize similar problems with regard to the movement of flammable liquids and gasses," Collier said.

In Youngstown, Fla., where a spewing chlorine tanker car sent up a cloud that killed eight persons, officials faced a tricky and dangerous clean-up job.

Workmen had bulldozed a trench Monday and will pump it full of caustic soda today from one of the other derailed tankers in the Bay Line train that ran off the track early Sunday and spewed its deadly cargo into the air.

When the trench is full of the neutralizing agent, the ruptured tanker will be winched slowly into the chemical bath. Another full chlorine tanker lies nearby, so far intact.

LASER SIGHT STOLEN

LONDON (UPI) — A highly accurate laser gunsight built for use against terrorists has disappeared from a science museum and may have fallen into "the very hands against which it was designed," its makers say.

"It may have been stolen by terrorists, by people acting on behalf of a foreign manufacturer, or by a government which we had refused to let look at it," Paul Cook, managing director of Scientifica and Cook Electronics, said Monday.

He said the sight, which sells for $2,350, throws a continuous red laser beam onto a target, giving accuracy "far in excess of normal." It can be fitted onto any rifle or submachine gun.

Cook said 25 of the newly developed "Laser Marksmen" have been sold to foreign security forces and the British military for testing.

Scotland Yard detectives said the sight was stolen Friday from an exhibit on laser technology at the Museum of Science. A spokesman said there were no signs of forced entry.

"We developed this highly accurate device for anti-terrorist use or against would-be assassins," Scientifica sales manager Tony Follmi said.

37,000 Bus Users Hurt

As a result, an afternoon concert planned for Wednesday has been cancelled.

Victoria police are bracing for an increase in traffic.

Saanich police are not contemplating bringing in additional officers, but in Victoria, where most of the traffic snarls are expected to occur, police are busy developing ways of contending with the increased traffic flow.

"I think motorists will have to exercise a bit more patience tomorrow," a spokesman said, adding commuters will be wise to give themselves more time in getting to and from work.

Vancouver Coach Lines said today that services to up-Island areas and the Victoria airports runs will not be affected.

And Vancouver Island Transit Limited runs to Langford, Colwood, Sooke and the Saanich Peninsula will also be operating on normal schedules.

B.C. Hydro transit manager George Searight said 37,600 persons on average ride the buses in midweek days.

"I expect there will be a lot of inconvenience for them," he said.

However, major employers anticipate few problems.

"Most of the people who work here it seems have their own cars or can at least make arrangements to get into a car pool," a spokesman for B.C. Firest Products said.

Hudsons Bay manager Ron Chorley said a circular was sent out Friday asking Bay employees to map the routes they take to work so that others who live on the route without transportation can arrange a ride.

Chorley said the strike will have an effect on downtown business.

"I think we can safely say we expect it'll be a somewhat slower day.

Transit workers in Vancouver and Victoria voted to reject provincial mediator Ken Albertini's recommendations to settle their contract dispute.

Union members were upset that Albertini recommended no reduction in their 37½-hour week, and with his proposal of a five-member committee to study Hydro demands for changes in bus drivers' spare board operation.

The union wants the spare board operation to remain as it is, and is demanding a 35-hour week, as worked by all other Hydro employees.

UVic Got Paid

If University of Victoria research facilities were used for Island Copper Mines environmental impact studies, the university was compensated for most of the work, according to president Howard Petch.

Possible conflict of interest has been charged against a UBC faculty team that conducted the environmental studies on the mine near Port Hardy.

Petch said a UVic biology professor on the team, Dr. Derek Ellis, was representing himself and not the university. Ellis owns a consulting company in Victoria.

The scientific findings have been criticized as biased toward the owners of Island Copper Mines, Utah Mines Ltd., which paid or the study.

The Sierra Club and the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers have asked the provincial government for an investigation.

The use of university facilities for personal projects is discouraged and the UVic administration is drawing up a policy to that effect, Petch said.

LOG DELAYS GULF FERRY

A log delayed ferry service between Swartz Bay and the outer Gulf Islands for a brief period today.

When the crew of the Mayne Queen arrived at the terminal this morning for her 5.30 a.m. run they discovered a log had floated in during the night and was lodged in her propellers.

The log was finally removed and the vessel was able to leave for her 9:45 a.m. round trip.

Now, Spreading Work Around

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Work sharing is one of the more current methods used to reduce layoffs.

It can take the form of contract provisions whereby employees turn down certain benefits in order to ensure the continued employment of all their colleagues.

This was the case last year when members of the International Typographical Union at Pacific Press Ltd. in Vancouver decided to forego a pay raise, give up certain other rights and go to a longer day, shorter work week in order to save jobs.

In Burnaby, another form of work sharing is being tried, this one a program offered by the Canadian Employment and Immigration Commission, formerly known as the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Last year, the commission announced a plan whereby employees could work a four-day week and receive a fifth day's pay at a reduced unemployment insurance rate.

On Jan. 15 Research Industries Ltd. of Burnaby entered into such an agreement with the commission and its employees in order to prevent the layoff of about 10 of the company's 40 skilled workers.

So now the company shuts down on Monday and the employees take the day off.

Research Industries, which designs and manufactures power equipment as well as sophisticated electronic equipment, is involved in the project on an experimental basis.

The pilot project is one of six across the country. There are two in Ontario, two in Quebec and one in the Maritimes.

Joe Rinaldi, manager of the B.C. and Yukon region's Manpower Consultative Service, emphasized in an interview that the program is at an experimental stage and not being offered to every company. He said he wants to see about six projects in B.C. involving companies of varying sizes.

The following conditions must be met before a company qualifies:

— The firm must be a Canadian company in business at least four years;

— The possibility must exist for the layoff of a significant percentage of the work force;

— The work shortage must be temporary and not caused directly by a labor dispute or for seasonal or cyclical reasons;

— The cause of the layoff must be clearly defined;

— There must be a mutual agreement by the company and union involved.

In this case the union involved is the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 264, and union business agent Bud Morris said the employees are naturally grateful for the government assistance.

★

However, he said, the reason the company was facing the layoffs due to a lack of market for Research Industries' products can be blamed on the federal government for giving grants to other companies who took work away from Research Industries.

"As a desperation sort of move, we have to accept it because there is nothing else we can do," Morris said.

He said when a vote was held among the employees on whether to go on the program, a large majority voted in favor. Those who turned it down did so mostly because they didn't understand the concept, he said.

The program works in the following manner:

If an employee, for example, was making $350 a week, four days work will give him $300 paid by the employer. The weekly unemployment insurance rate for that individual will likely be about $150 and the worker is entitled to 20 per cent of that or $30.

In effect, the worker is getting $20 a week less but saving the jobs of about 10 of his colleagues.

Rinaldi said it is a new concept and represents a shift away from the "I'm-not-my-brothers-keeper" philosophy.

The program calls for a change of attitude by trade unions, imposes a burden on the company in the sense that rather than lay off employees, the company keeps them on and maintains fringe benefits, like dental plans and pensions.

It also calls for a government subsidy which, in cases where possibly a 100 people are involved, could work out to a considerable amount of money, Rinaldi said.

All these factors will be taken into consideration when the commission examines the pilot projects later this year and makes a decision on whether they will be part of a permanent program.

Rinaldi said the commission will participate in the Research Industries project for about 20 weeks. It is expected the company will be back in full swing by May 1, he added.

Ron Johnson, spokesman for the B.C. Federation of Labor, said the labor body views the program as "a stopgap measure."

★

"This kind of bandaiding doesn't accomplish anything," he said.

If Ottawa was using the work-sharing project as a temporary measure prior to some long-term program for combatting unemployment, the federation would be completely in favor, he said.

But if this is the government's only solution, then the federation agrees with the short-term benefits for a few but rejects the concept philosophically because it is not a proper solution to the more serious problem.

Heavy CUPE Attack On Municipal Gang-Up

The B.C. division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) today urged the provincial government to amend labor legislation in order to prevent public sector groups from banding together in bargaining associations.

In a brief to the cabinet, meeting in Esquimalt, the union says the use of such associations will only increase the number of disputes and involve a larger number of workers.

"The relinquishing of public duties by local politicians to an accredited organization is anti-democratic," the brief states.

"Our experience with accredited employers demonstrates that accreditation means polarization and confrontation and the denial of services to members of the community."

The brief was presented to the government as part of a two-day CUPE seminar, which began Monday at The Empress, on the subject of accredited groups being given the authority to handle employer-union matters.

Such accredited groups exist in the Okanagan, the Kootenays and on Vancouver Island with the Mid-Island Public Employers' Association and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, which bargains for area school boards and municipalities.

The CUPE brief says the concept of accreditation began with the construction industry to prevent whipsawing and leapfrogging tactics by trade unions in order to get the best possible contract.

However, there is a considerable difference between the public sector and the construction industry and the accreditation concept was applied to municipalities and school boards without a proper assessment of its impact, the brief says.

CUPE says B.C. is the only province which extends the accreditation principle to the public sector.

The union says by entering into an arrangement with an independent organization and contracting out their responsibilities to a non-elected third party, "politicians are protecting themselves from the public."

High-priced "experts" are hired to represent the association, CUPE says, and the union has found that in most cases these individuals have an anti-union bias and only serve to increase the confrontation between the employees and politicans.

"Employers have sought accreditation basically for one reason — to pit their united strength against union members.

"Accreditation has resulted in widespread, prolonged disruptions which have been exceedingly costly to union members and the community."

SORRY, SPRING LITTLE DELAYED

A mixture of rain and snow reminded Greater Victorians today spring is still a long way off.

The culprit was a ridge of low pressure that brought snow showers down the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Snow at Victoria International Airport cut visibility to one mile but did not affect flying schedules.

Temperatures in Victoria wavered between two and five degrees Celsius and are expected to dip to zero or minus 3 tonight.

The cold snap is expected to continue Wednesday.

Bennett Going On Vacation

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday he won't campaign in the Oak Bay byelection.

Bennett said he will not return until around March 18.

Although he's taking his wife Audrey, the premier called it a working holiday.

He said he will prepare the throne speech to be delivered when the new session of the legislature opens March 30.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Can you tell me what caused the entry of Great Britian into the First World War? D.B.W.

A. A breach of the Quintuple Treaty of 1839. By this treaty the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by the Great Powers after Belgium had revolted from the Netherlands in 1830. Germany violated the treaty by invading Belgium and Britain entered the war.

New Look At Student Suspensions

A high absentee rate, bullying and other disruptive behavior in Greater Victoria schools have led trustees to examine the practice of punishing students by suspending them.

An investigation of the suspension practice has started at the request of the board, school superintendent Allan Stables said.

Bullying is the greatest problem followed by absenteeism, Stables told the board, at a meeting Monday night.

Students are suspended only after every other avenue has been taken, he said.

Trustees are under the "misapprehension" it is the first time for the students who get suspended, Stables said.

"Dozens of hours and massive amounts of school time have gone into dealing with those children," he said.

It is wrong to believe schools can cure all the ills of society, Stables said.

Trustee John Young called student suspensions a "painful destructive practice" and called for a close look at other solutions.

The real problem is in the system, Young said. He suggested the board talk to principals and teachers to improve inadequate programs.

Where schools satisfy the emotional and educational needs of children there are no problems, he said.

Young was supported by Trustee Mary Breer, who said students are having problems rather than being problems.

Meet B.C.'s Bouncy Heart Boy

Danny Greir, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Greir of 890 Burnside Road West, faces his third bout of heart surgery in two months' time.

He's looking forward to it.

The valve operation will be done at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children and for a week before it's scheduled Danny and his family will visit relatives and friends they knew when they lived in Ontario.

Danny was born with a congenital heart defect. Why? This is what B.C. Heart Foundation researchers would like to know. His family is a healthy one. There's nothing wrong with his brother Mark, 15, and his sister Kelly, 17.

Danny has been chosen this year's Heart Boy for the fund-raising campaign which ends March 10.

Meeting him you know why.

He loves to play centre field and pitch with his Little League baseball team. He started to learn golf last year. He enjoys badminton, swimming, skiing, hiking and camping.

He was the top runner at Marigold school until his second operation — open heart surgery at Vancouver General Hospital last spring.

The coming operation, Danny hopes, will once again allow him to take part in track and field events.

Ruth Greir says, except for contact sports, her son's heart condition has never kept him from the athletics he loves so much. He just tries that much harder to be as normal as he can.

Pleased that her son is this year's heart boy, she says: "You don't realize how much work is needed (on research) until it hits home.

"Had he been born even 12 years earlier a lot of this wouldn't have been possible."

TOWN TALK

Consumers and local businessmen are exhorted to buy Canadian, to support B.C. firms, to help the local economy. But there are limits to patriotism, as Victoria businessman Mike McSorley complained this week to Town Talk.

"It's so expensive to do business here," he said.

He runs Audiotronics Enterprises, a Fort Street supplier of electronic components, and purchases wholesale a large volume of items. Thousands of circuit boards, for example.

"We try to do as much business in B.C., right on the Island, but sometimes we have to go east."

He can purchase the boards in Eastern Canada and have them delivered here, and they are still 20 per cent cheaper than the best quote from a Vancouver supplier.

Another example: his business uses thousands of small cardboard boxes for packing components. McSorley wants to give the business to a supplier in B.C. — which with all the pulp and paper made here should be able to fill the bill — but the best price he can get from the numerous Vancouver manufacturers is 39½ cents per thousand.

A Seattle firm can supply the same 3½-inch-square boxes for 17 cents a thousand, and even with transport costs and the 17½ per cent customs duty, they can be delivered to Victoria for just over half the price quoted in Vancouver.

"It makes it so bloody expensive here," says McSorley. "They (B.C. businessmen) need a good kick in the ass."

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers had just finished telling Victoria city council what a hawker does by legal definition when Mayor Mike Young asked him: "And what does a solicitor do?"

Replied de Villiers without hesitation: "Well it depends on the kind of solicitor — whether it's one who's at bar or just one who frequents them."

In Honolulu, Capt. Cook's bicentennial seems to have had a year's head start, and Victoria visitor Eric McMorran thinks more is being made there of the explorer's voyage than here.

McMorran is back from his annual wintering in a Kauai condominium, clutching a length of cotton shirting published by the Honolulu Advertiser.

This consists of facsimile printing of the paper's front page from last July, which was made up with ancient woodcuts to resemble the period July, 1776, when Cook sailed from Plymouth harbor for the last time.

On Jan. 18 this year, the Advertiser commemorated the 200th anniversary of the discovery of Hawaii (the Sandwich Islands, as Cook called them), putting out bolts of shirting showing H.M.S. Resolution and Cook's landing on Kauai.

For three days last month a special Cook postage stamp drew 10,000 persons to a philatelic gathering at a Honolulu hotel.

"The Americans are making more out this than we are," McMorran said.

Greater Victoria school trustee John Young got caught with his chauvinism showing at a meeting Monday night when, during a heated debate, he made reference to "God Almighty Himself."

"Or herself," crisply replied chairman Susan Brice, making Young apologize for the sexist comment.

King Kootenay

Seventy-five crew members of the Esquimalt-based destroyer HMCS Kootenay, commanded by Cmdr. B.P. Moore, lived the life of a king recently when they visited Nuku Alofa, the capital of Tonga.

They spent the day at the private island of King Taufa Afau Topou IV of Tonga, a highlight being a meal cooked by natives in a jungle clearing 500 yards from the beach.

Small pigs were slaughtered, cleaned and turned slowly over open fires until they were golden brown.

Coconuts, yams, fish, octopuses and other tropical dishes were wrapped in banana leaves and cooked in a pit covered with palm leaves.

Parades are for kids to watch, not take part in.

That's how the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association feels about this year's Victorian Days parade.

The association ruled Monday children under 15 won't be allowed to participate in the annual march and instead a separate parade will be held for them.

A City Hall spokesman said the rule is being introduced because some children have had difficulty finishing the route.

But Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe, who is a member of the celebrations association, said he didn't like the new regulation and will see if he can get the age limit lowered to 12.

"Parades are supposed to be for kids and I doubt if anyone would bother going to a separate parade for children," said Blencoe.

Altogether 600 indignant Victorians walked out of the Bastion production of Comedians during its three-week run at McPherson Playhouse but box office business recorded it as the biggest seller of the season save for Bastion's Christmas show.

Bastion promotion gal Judith Kerr says one reviewer came to see the show having already reviewed three other productions of it and said Victoria's was the best of the four. According to Judith, artistic director Ed Stephenson has no regrets.

Total ticket sales for Comedians amounted to $13,000.

The production, criticized for its coarse language, gave Bastion more Canada-wide coverage than almost anything in the theatre's history.

It also appeared to confirm, according to national news coverage, the impression in other parts of Canada that Victorians are generally a starchy, stiff-necked lot.

Canada Is No.1 Investor in U.S.

The direct flow of Canadian investment dollars to the U.S. has been gaining momentum, while in the U.S. there appears to be a lack of investor confidence in Canada. This article explores some of the reasons behind the trends.

The Canadian Press

When Toronto-based Cadillac Fairview Corp. Ltd. set out recently to develop eight shopping centres in the United States, it wasn't its first sampling of the American business climate.

Nor was it blazing a trail for others. Canadian companies had direct investments of $5.68 billion in the U.S. at the end of 1975, up from $4.90 billion a year earlier.

The figures, provided by Statistics Canada, also showed Canadians with a total $10.67 billion invested in various foreign countries in 1975, the total including reinvested earnings.

And while the federal government agency had no similar statistics for 1976 or 1977, sources in the private sector said the direct flow of Canadian dollars to the U.S. has been gaining momentum.

The New York-based Conference Board reported that Canadian companies made 19 new investments in the U.S. during the third quarter of 1977, leading all other countries with an eye to the American scene.

Meanwhile, the flow of U.S. capital into Canada has been increasing at a slower rate—to $32.2 billion in 1975 from $29 billion in 1974—and some see this as a lack of investor confidence in this country.

"We have to get our house in order and make it more attractive for private capital, or else Canada will become a sleeping backwater," said Ralph Sultan, chief economist with the Royal Bank of Canada.

"Capital lacks loyalty and there's not much government can do. Capital will go where returns are most attractive."

U.S. real estate has been particularly alluring to Canadian individual and corporate investors.

"It's a big market and the opportunities are there," said Lawrence Shankman, president of Consolidated Building Corp. in Toronto.

"The U.S. economy is better than the Canadian economy."

Cadillac Fairview, whose real-estate assets in the U.S. are approaching $200 million, sees more immediate promise in that country than in Canada.

"We're not selling out Canadian assets, nor turning our backs on good Canadian opportunities, but they are few and far between," said Cadillac president Neil Wood.

"Government delays in getting approvals continue to frustrate us in Canada compared with the U.S., where development is welcomed."

Joanne Peluso, secretary-treasurer of Montreal-based Clifton Management Co., said her company spent about $25 million on U.S. real estate last year.

"Although we take a 10-per-cent loss on currency exchange, we'd rather take that than gamble in Canada where there are so many political uncertainties.

Many of the political uncertainties have been spawned by the independence movement in Quebec and some of the Canadian investments move only a short distance from there to United States border points.

Elbert Moulton, Vermont's development commissioner, said the number of inquiries from Quebec businesses interested in expanding to that state has mushroomed during the last few months.

"We can afford to be selective," he said. "The focus of our effort is in Montreal.

"Our position is that if they want to go to the U.S., then we better act while the fire is hot."

But the trend has also been strong toward Buffalo, across the U.S. border from Ontario.

Charles Light, president of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, said the city attracted 40 Canadian firms last year, about twice as many as in 1976.

The chamber receives an average of 12 inquiries a week from Canadian firms interested in the U.S., Light said, with most of them citing high taxes, high inflation and excessive government control at home.

However, distance has not been a factor in all of the Canadian moves, particularly in bigger investments.

Among the larger investments by Canadian firms last year were the $70-million B.C. Forest Products Ltd. takeover of a Minnesota paper company plant, the $140-million Alcan Aluminium Ltd. takeover of a Revere Copper and Brass Co. plant in Alabama, the $95-million acquisition and reconstruction announcement by Co-Steel of Toronto of a New Jersey plant, and the multi-million-dollar acquisition by Dominion Textile Ltd. of a plant in Louisiana.

Northern Telecom Ltd., a subsidiary of Bell Canada, has been especially busy training its sights on the U.S.

Late last year, it reached agreement to swap stock worth $77 million for Sycor Inc., an Ann Arbor, Mich., maker of electronic terminals.

At about the same time it acquired a 10-per-cent interest, worth $15 million, in Minneapolis-based DATA 100 Corp., a manufacturer of computer terminal systems.

In addition, it has been negotiating to acquire DanRay Corp., a Dallas-based manufacturer of private telephone branch exchanges and network switching equipment.

Genstar Ltd., a Montreal-based construction conglomerate involved in residential development across Canada, said recently it will divert more of its attention to the U.S., particularly Texas and the west coast.

Katherine Taylor, a spokesman for the company, credited the laissez-faire American market with providing much of the attraction.

In Canada, she said, a developer could wait five years to get a subdivision approved

Mining Resources 'Increasingly Lean'

DENVER (CP) — A Canadian tax specialist warned today that while resources in Canada and the United States are vast, they are also becoming increasingly lean.

"It will require substantially more in the way of both exploration and development to bring new reserves into production than it has in the past, and the present depressed world markets for many minerals may not justify this type of commitment," said R. D. Brown, senior tax partner of Price Waterhouse and Co. of Toronto.

He told the annual conference of the American Institute of Mining Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers that employment in mining is declining as the industry is faced with high costs, low prices and difficulties in competing in the market.

He said mining in Canada is likely to make a declining contribution to employment and exports in the next decade.

As to leanness of resources, he said copper is a good example.

Copper has been the second most valuable commodity produced in Canada with peak sales in the mid-1970s of about $1.4 billion.

But the deposits which hold almost half of Canada's remaining copper reserves "are perhaps the lowest grade now being mined anywhere in the world."

Because of this low grade, high costs and cyclical prices, the copper industry was struggling.

Another example, he said, was Canada's iron ore industry which is in danger of losing its traditional markets to higher grade and lower cost ores from Australia, Brazil and the United States.

PCB Tests Questioned In Mill Explosion Trial

TERRACE (CP) — A sediment reading alone is insufficient to determine if a certain chemical could have harmful effects on animal life, a biochemist testified Monday at a pollution trial in this northwestern British Columbia community.

The trial of Canadian Cellulose Ltd., which reconvened this week after a four-month adjournment, is attempting to determine if the provincially-owned company is responsible for a transformer explosion which allegedly polluted the waters of Porpoise Harbor near Prince Rupert with polychlorinated byphenels (PCBs) in January, 1977.

Dr. Gary Vigers, a biochemist with E. B. S. Consultants Ltd., told the court that tests and analyses other than those taken from sediment readings would be necessary to determine if PCBs could have a harmful effect on fish or other animal life.

Two parts of PCB per million has been established as a safe level for food for human consumption in Canada, said Vigers. In the United States, the level is five parts per million.

Vigers said 2 p.p.m is a medical figure and doesn't reflect on levels which could be injurious to fish in water.

PCBs are used in electrical transformers as an insulating fluid.

Last October, Crown counsel Werner Heinrich called several witnesses from Environment Canada who testified on the effects of PCBs. Biologist Chris Garrett testified at that time that PCB may be as deadly as DDT because of its lasting effect on the environment.

Vigers, however, said Monday that PCBs do not travel far in the water and the most common means of entry into an organism is through direct absorption rather than through the food chain.

In tests conducted since the last session of the trial, Vigers said he found that herring do not pick up significant amounts of PCBs from sediment.

Vigers also testified that PCBs are present throughout the environment and in human tissue, making it very difficult to accurately test for their presence following a spill.

The trial continues.

B.C. Court Upholds Krishnas

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court has upheld a religious group's claim that a Penticton city bylaw designed to give city council control of literature distributed on the streets would restrict free speech.

Justice K. E. Meredith ruled that it is beyond council's powers to enact a law that would force groups distributing literature or advertising to have council's permission.

The bylaw was challenged by the Hare Krishna Society, which had appied in September, 1977, to come to Penticton to distribute literature and lecture about its beliefs.

The city refused permission and the issue was taken to the B.C. Supreme Court.

In his decision, Justice Meredith relied on a Supreme Court of Canada finding in a case brought by Jehovah's Witnesses in Quebec that it is a fundamental right of Canadians to distribute literature and to make known their religious and political views without express permission of the goverment.

Failure Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The office of the superintendent of bankruptcy is investigating the transactions of Dupex Energy Sealants Ltd., an office spokesman told a meeting of the company's creditors Monday.

The Port Coquitlam firm, which sold and installed insulated windows, stopped operations last month, leaving customers trying to get back deposits on incompleted contracts.

The company's problems came to light last month when Alfred Paul Allen, the sole owner, voluntarily placed two companies that succeeded it into bankruptcy.

Union Says WCB Changed Rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada Local 8 at Nanaimo released a brief Monday which pinpoints four areas where it says the Workers Compensation Board altered regulations, disregarding public hearings.

The brief says that:

—the allowable level of methyl mercaptan, a highly toxic and flammable gas emitted at MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Harmac operation, has been increased to allow six times as much to be discharged during an eight-hour period and twice as much during a 15-minute period;

—a 10-year old regulation which required employers to comply immediately with board orders has been dropped;

—it is no longer clear that companies will be held legally responsible for all breaches of the regulations, breaking a 20-year old pattern;

—a worker's right to refuse to work in hazardous conditions has been cut back severely.

"These changes . . . are consistently detrimental to workers and threaten to have the most serious negative impact upon occupational health and safety," said the 18-page brief, prepared by lawyer Craig Paterson.

The new board regulations came into affect Jan. 1, 1978, following five years of review, which included publication of two draft proposals before a mandatory public hearing was called in May, 1976.

The union claims that the board failed to put forward the changes made in these four regulations before the hearing, and no other party proposed the changes at the May, 1976, hearings.

"It is common knowledge within and without the WCB that all of the aforementioned changes were made privately within the WCB between the May, 1976, hearings and the fall of 1977 and that these changes were made in total disregard of the record of public hearings and the WCB's prior second draft amendments," the brief said.

While the board examines the brief, the national executive of the union will decide later this week whether or not to take further action.

Paterson said that the provision for public hearings before regulatory amendments are made does not prohibit the board from changing its proposed position, but it "surely cannot be read to authorize subsequent self-generated WCB regulartory changes that bear no logical connection to WCB, corporate or workers' representation."

Before the mercaptan levels were altered to three parts a million from 0.5 parts a million during an eight-hour period and to three parts a million from 1.5 parts a million for a 15-minute span "no opportunity of any kind was provided to the PPWC, other trade unions or the public to consider this proposal," he said.

The union has asked the board for copies of all written communication between the board and MacMillan Blodel or any other employers' group regarding the amendment of this pollution standard.

The union argues that "companies are under no enforceable obligation to comply with inspectors' orders within any general time-frame or under any uniform criteria."

The new regulations state that workers can only refuse to work if they are facing a danger which is not normal for the job. The union says this new restriction makes the regulation inconsistent and more limited than arbitration law, B.C. mining legislation and the B.C. labor code.

The union wants the board to reinstitute either the former regulations or amendments proposed at the public hearing.

COLLEGE TAX HIGH

COURTENAY (CP) — Comox-Strathcona regional board will ask Education Minister Pat McGeer to look into allegations that North Island College programs are straining the resources of the small community of Tahsis on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

"The village pays the school board $300,000 a year as its asssessment to the school district," village director Bill Lore told the board Monday. "Of that, $66,000 is taken from the school board for the college.

Jail Sex Unproven: RCMP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Interviews with prisoners, former prisoners and staff at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) produced no firm evidence to back up allegations that guards authorized day passes for female prisoners in return for sexual favors, an RCMP spokesman said Monday.

Sergeant Darrell Shield, testifying at a public inquiry into conditions at women's prisons in British Columbia, said only one criminal charge — involving welfare fraud — arose from an RCMP investigation last November.

Shield also submitted a report as a confidential exhibit which described several incidents investigated by police.

One such incident occurred when a female prisoner escaped from a guard after the two had visited a former prisoner.

The former prisoner told Shield that, during the visit, she and the prisoner each drank five bottles of beer while the guard drank tea.

The prisoner said she left to get more beer with $5 given to her by the guard, a charge denied by the guard, Shield said.

Shield said the former prisoner said that the guard was asleep when the prisoner left and that he "jumped up kind of surprised."

The woman said that when the guard called the prison, he told the former prisoner "to keep quiet and he would make it sound like he was phoning from a restaurant . . . and report the escape from another location," Shield said.

The guard said that after going shopping, he and the prisoner went to the woman's apartment, Shield said. The guard said that while at the apartment, the prisoner left to visit a neighbor and didn't come back.

The inquiry was told earlier that the guard received a verbal reprimand because of the incident.

The prisoner was picked up that night by other Oakalla guards in a beer parlor in Vancouver's Gastown area.

The inquiry, headed by Justice Patricia Proudfoot of the B.C. Supreme Court, continues.

Study Urges Better Rural Education

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia needs a central institute to co-ordinate various methods of delivering education to rural residents wishing to upgrade their education and increase their income, says a report released Monday.

The Distance Education Planning Group found that those living in or near the Greater Vancouver and the Greater Victoria areas can attend a university or college, but it is more difficult for rural residents, many of whom quit school 15 years ago and now want to finish their schooling.

The seven-member group, appointed by the ministry of education to examine ways of delivering education to the isolated, found that long-distance courses are being offered in a helter-skelter fashion.

To correct this, it recommends setting up a central distance education institute similar to the open learning institute announced earlier by Education Minister Pat McGeer.

The group, headed by economist and consultant Pat Carney, assessed the needs of B.C. residents and concluded that rather than offering university degrees, an educational institute should deliver courses to the worker or snow-bound housewife wanting professional development, vocational skills or basic adult education.

While recognizing the distance education programs of conventional universities and learning centres, the group recommends several other methods.

"No single communications mode, be it face-to-face instruction or cable television, can be adequate for delivering distance education, "the report says." The most effective distance education systems incorporate a variety of modes including print, face-to-face, audio or video tapes, computer assisted learning, library or broadcast systems."

The planning group found that systems allowing a two-way conversation between student and teacher are the most effective.

IMPORT RESTRICTIONS HURT B.C., SAYS MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Import restrictions imposed by the government on textiles and footwear last year are hurting British Columbia retailers because there are no Canadian supplies of the products available, Progressive Conservative MP John Fraser said Monday.

Fraser told the Commons sales in some B.C. stores have dropped by one-third because the imported products are off the market.

He urged the government as well to investigate domestic sales and purchases of import quotas among retailers brought on by the short supply of some products.

The MP from Vancouver South sought government assurances that the quota restrictions be reviewed because much of the product cannot be supplied domestically.

Fraser said small businessmen are being hurt because they cannot afford to buy additional quotas. Larger retailers are selling their excess quotas for profit, he said.

Maurice Harquail, parliamentary assistant to Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, said the government has investigated the situation and found no evidence of quotas being bought and sold in Canada.

Harquail said the transfer of quota is prohibited under the Export and Import Permits Act.

Pulp Topples Killing Man

SQUAMISH (CP) — A 32-year-old Vancouver man was killed Monday when a stack of pulp toppled over on him in this community about 60 kilometres north of Vancouver.

RCMP said the man was working at the Squamish Terminals near the pulp stack when a one-ton unit fell. The victim's name was not released.

. . . How Not To Be A-G

Justice Minister Ron Basford said in Victoria Monday an autographed picture of former U.S. attorney-general John Mitchell, jailed for Watergate offences, is a cherished souvenir of his years in the Canadian government.

Basford, who is resigning from politics at the next federal election, told a meeting of the Canadian Bar Association council at The Empress the photograph has increased in value over the years as a reminder of "how not to be an attorney-general."

Basford said that, regardless of other shortcomings of the Canadian system, there had never been a case of an attorney-general subverting the laws for political ends.

"I am proud of that fact."

He said the rule of law has never been subverted in Canada by the attorney-general (justice minister) or by the legal profession.

Basford was given a rousing ovation by the 250 law delegates for his remarks.

Basford said it was probably his last speech to the group as attorney-general.

He had announced earlier he would resign effective with the next federal election, expected this year.

"I thought I should indicate to the lawyers of Canada there is an upcoming vacancy".

He said the Canadian government and the legal profession are both fully committed to the concept of the non-partisan rule of law. This principle had been subverted in the United States but not in Canada, Basford said.

He said the legal profession could also be assured the federal government will remain committed to the concept of appointment to the judiciary according to merit.

Basford said he got the autographed picture from Mitchell during his first visit to Washington after becoming minister of consumer and corporate affairs and before Mitchell became embroiled in the Watergate trials.

The value of the photograph has increased over the years as a reminder of Canada's record of upholding the sanctity of the rule of law, he said.

The Canadian Bar Association council meeting began Sunday and concludes Wednesday. An attempt to give official status to a French version of the association's name was thwarted when some argued it should be "Du Barreau Canadien" while others held out for the full title of "L'Association du Barreau Canadien."

The lawyers decided to table the question after the debate became prolonged.

★

Judge Choice Changes Due

Justice Minister Ron Basford said Monday he is revamping a national committee which makes recommendations on appointments of county and supreme court judges.

Basford said during a speech to the mid-winter meeting of the national council of the Canadian Bar Association that the changes should come into effect in the near future.

Under the present system set up in 1967, the justice minister gives to a 10-member committee of the association a list of those he feels should be appointed.

The committee then checks the credentials of those named and makes non-binding recommendations to the minister, who then presents the names to cabinet for final approval.

Basford said Monday that the committee system has worked well but he wants it restructured to allow greater regional input.

He also wants the committee to accept non-association members. Only in British Columbia and New Brunswick are lawyers compelled to belong to the association.

On another matter, Basford reiterated his support for a relaxation of marijuana laws.

Delegates at the Liberal policy convention in Ottawa during the weekend passed a resolution calling for possession of the drug to be removed from the Criminal Code.

The minister said he believes simple possession should be an offence under the Food and Drug Act "and decriminalized in such a way so that there is not a criminal record built up as a result of possession."

Three For the Money? It's Up to DataTech

Basketball came of age again on the weekend. Not only in Victoria where the two University teams, the Vikings and Vikettes captured the Canada West championships in series against Calgary, but also on the mainland.

Officials of the DataTech senior "A" men's squad which went south of the border to get its competition this season were almost certain that the move would result in a better ball club and aparently it has paid off.

DataTech obviously surprised the strong Burnaby team from the Dogwood League in the first game of the B.C. senior final, winning handily and now being in the driver's seat with the next two games scheduled here in Victoria.

Actually, however, it shouldn't have come as that great a shocker. Two years ago, DataTech (nee Scorpions) were the best in that league and weren't too far away from a Dominion championship, losing by a narrow margin right here in the nationals.

Last year the Scorpions were barely edged out and lost a committee battle as well that might have changed that result around.

This season, it has been a case of playing the powerful Seattle area clubs with their strong complement of ex-College players; and DataTech did better than all right in that competition by finishing with a 9-9 record.

Now they are on the threshold of another chance at the nationals and it would be no surprise if they make it in straight games.

* * *

Meanwhile, all hats must be doffed (again) to the Vikettes of coach Mike Gallo. It was almost methodical the manner in which the Vikettes disposed of the Calgary Dinnies in their two-game western final. Now it remains to be seen if Gallo and his girls can win the Canadian. Certainly, off their two victories over the Laurentian Vees earlier this season, the Vikettes must rule as tournament favorites for the series which opens in Calgary Thursday night, even if they did happen to get the extra half of the draw. But that's the way the ball bounces at times and so far it has bounced very well for the Vikettes who are the class of the west and maybe the country. And besides, Gallo would seem to deserve this one in his swan song as UVic coach.

Mike says he is on his way after this year, but he also has hedged a little, which is his prerogative. He has left the door open for a return to the sport — somewhere. After all, it's what he has been doing every winter for the past 17 years — teaching and coaching basketball; and people just don't change their habits overnight.

* * *

The Vikings bounced back with more than a vengeance against the Dinosaurs on Sunday in their oftimes bitter series. And Sunday's test was in that category too. The Vikings seemingly weren't about to take a beating from the Dinosaurs physically or on the scoreboard. And it was their turn to take complete charge. Reni Dolcetti may have set the pattern when he took care of Lyle Leslie of the Dinosaurs early on a hard check that went undetected although it could be heard all over the gym. Then later Leslie was clobbered again. So Dolcetti's been described as a time bomb; but it's equally true that, as he goes, so go the Vikings at times. He's the big man on the boards and he's got to be for the team's fast break to function.

Actually, too, Billy Loos probably deserves more attention than he gets — and by his scoring feats he gets plenty. For he is an excellent rebounder, both offensively and defensively. He picked off 13 on Sunday to lead all the Vikings. As for his scoring feats, the record speaks for itself. All he did in this series was score 22 points in the opener, 39 in a losing cause Saturday and 34 on Sunday. And he can go inside or hit from outside, it doesn't matter; And the key to his talent can best be measured by the fact that rarely is he under the 50 per cent mark in average. On Sunday, for example, he was 15 for 22, which will do nicely in the nationals, thank you.

Otherwise, Craig Higgins must rank as one the smoothest and most unselfish players around. "He was the star of the game," coach Ken Shields was heard to remark after Friday's opening game victory; and he may have been close to the truth at that. As for Robbie Parris, now it can be told. He suffered a deep gash on his forehead while practicing for the tournament. It took 30 stitches to close the wound and plastic surgery to help with the mending, which is why he wore a fighter's helmet during the series.

Parris makes the Viking fast break tick. That is indisputable; and he causes the other club defensive problems with his quick bursts. When the Vikes are running, they look great. When they're not, that's when sometimes they have their problems.

Now, however, it's on to the biggie, the eight-team college championship in Halifax.

They should prove a worthy representative although the competition can only get tougher from now on.

All of which has helped to keep basketball on the map here; and right at the top too.

The Vikettes and Vikings have already won the west and DataTech appears about ready to do the same.

It's just like the old days and shades of the Dominoes, Cec's U Drive, Maplettes, Home Lumber. Champions all.

Good luck!.

EASILY IDENTIFIABLE? Chicago's Cliff Koroll is but Toronto's Borje Salming (21) isn't with owner Harold Ballard's blue-on-blue lettering.

Ballard Makes Mockery of Rule

CHICAGO (AP) — Toronto owner Harold Ballard has John Ziegler, president of the National Hockey League, seeing red because all anyone else can see is Maple Leafs blue.

Ballard, in order "to make a complete mockery of the ruling," as he put it, had the names of his players sewn on the backs of their jerseys for Sunday night's NHL game here against Chicago Black Hawks.

"I've complied with the NHL bylaw " he admitted proudly. "The names are stitched on, three inches high.

"It's a pity you can't see them."

The reason for that is the letters were of the same blue color as the team's road sweaters.

"I'll never make it as a color co-ordinator," Ballard said.

Ziegler has thoughts of his own on that matter, since he ruled weeks ago that the Maple Leafs must—like every other team in the NHL—wear uniforms bearing their names on the back during league games.

Ballard, who rebelled against the bylaw which was accepted by a 13-to-5 vote of the NHL board of governors, faced a league fine of some $5,000 for noncompliance. In doing so, he thumbed his nose while tweaking Ziegler's in print.

"Mr. Ziegler is just going to have to keep his little nose out of my business," said Ballard, who continually makes on-the-record comments regarding the physical stature of the diminutive league president.

"It's always the smallest guy in the school yard that makes the most noise," was another of Ballard's comments on the matter which began as a conflict of philosophies but has escalated considerably since then.

"I also thought about switching the sweaters, like having (defenceman) Ian Turnbull wear (left winger Errol) Thompson's, having (defenceman Borje) Salming wear (goalie Mike) Palmateer's and the like," chortles Ballard. "But I checked the rules and found out I couldn't do those things."

Ziegler has been steadfast in maintaining a low profile on the matter, which he considers "private league business."

But Ballard proclaims his innocence as well, maintaining the use of his players' names on their sweaters is a property right and therefore a business asset with which he can do anything he wants.

In this instance, Ballard sold the name rights to the people who print the program at Maple Leaf Gardens, and claims he is bound by contract not to comply with the league regulation.

Ziegler permitted the blustery owner to use the players' names only on their road uniforms and not at all on their home uniforms.

But Ballard's flaunting of Ziegler's directive may have pushed the league president into action.

Ziegler refused to comment on Ballard's ploy.

"I'll let Mr. Ballard do the talking in the press," the NHL boss said. "Harold likes to see his name in print. The position I'm at will remain a private matter."

Ballard, seemingly expecting some disciplinary measure by Ziegler, said he might use a different color for the players' names or use their first names instead of their last.

Thus Palmateer's sweater would have Mike on the back, Salming's would be emblazoned with Borje, etc.

"I defy anyone to tell me it's harder to make out the names on our sweaters than it is on those of the referees and linesmen," says Ballard.

But the first three words appeared to capsulize Ballard's stance on the matter: "I defy anyone."

Flames Continue To Burn Rangers

The Canadian Press

National Hockey League fans in New York had a chance Monday night to sit in on the NHL television network's game of the week at Madison Square Gardens while those in Vancouver had the dubious pleasure of watching a game of the weak at the Pacific Coliseum.

The New York match featured two Patrick Division rivals—Atlanta Flames and the Rangers. The Flames, who had not won since beating Minnesota North Stars 7-4 on Jan. 31, came from behind to take a 5-3 decision from New York.

Meanwhile in Vancouver, the Canucks and the Barons, who both have trouble beating anybody, played to a 3-3 tie.

Since joining the NHL in 1972, the Flames have taken 36 points of a possible 64 and in their latest conquest, they used a three-goal spurt in a span of 5:43 in the third period to defeat the Rangers for the fourth time in as many games this season.

The Rangers have managed just one victory and two ties in the last 14 meetings between the two clubs and have not beaten Atlanta since March 30, 1976.

Bill Clement's third short-handed goal of the season with 57 seconds left in the second period pulled Atlanta even at 2-2 before Don Murdoch put New York back in front 52 seconds into the third period.

Ken Houston snapped a 25-foot shot past rookie Swedish goaltender Hardy Astrom at 3:48 and Plett added his 12th of the season from 20 feet at 7:56 and Richard Mulhern completed to the Flames outburst 95 seconds later.

The Flames improved their chances for one of the four wild-card spots in the NHL playoffs while the loss further damaged New York's hopes.

The Barons have a mathematical shot at a playoff berth as well, but the feeling is they will not make it.

Rookie Kris Manery scored with six seconds left to cap a three-goal Cleveland outburst in the final period and give the Barons the draw in a loosely-played contest before about 12,500 fans.

Manery's 21st goal came after the Barons had pulled goaltender Gary Edwards for an extra attacker twice in the last 30 seconds.

The Canucks, second in the Smythe Division, moved four points ahead ofthird-place Colorado Rockies with the tie. Vancouver has a 16-31-14 record for 46 points.

Shaw Won't Trade Hawk Weaknesses

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Maybe Brian Shaw was just trying to get Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe to drop his guard, but the manager of Portland's team in the Western Canada Hockey League sees several weaknesses in his Winter Hawks.

Arriving in town for tonight's Memorial Arena meeting with the Cougars, Shaw said Monday that, among other things, Portland is "without a natural goal-scorer."

It might be a strange comment, especially when one studies WCHL scoring statistics and can count seven Portland players who have scored 20 or more goals.

"Potentially," Shaw explained, "we could have seven 40-goal scorers this year. But, really, we don't have a 'natural' scorer along the lines of a Ron Chipperfield, Rick Blight, Darcy Rota, Tom Lysiak or Lanny McDonald (former WCHL performers who have made their marks in professional ranks).

"Our most dangerous scorers are Wayne Babych and Doug Lecuyer. . . but they get their goals by overpowering goalies with their great shots. They have to work. And when they work, the scoring chances and goals come. . .but not naturally."

Another "weakness" is Portland's overall size. The Western Division leaders rank as the biggest team in the league but, to Shaw's way of thinking, that's a detriment.

"Really," he said with a straight face. "One thing that hampers our club is a lack of power-play scoring chances.

Our size intimidates referees — not that I would want to criticize the officials.

"When things happen on the ice, and because we're big, the referees naturally assume we're doing things that we shouldn't be doing."

Shupe, who sends the Cougars against the Hawks three times in the next three days, wasn't dropping his guard in the Victoria office Monday.

"Would you be interested in trading all your weaknesses to Victoria?" he asked.

Despite the obvious balance in Portland's attack, the Hawks are without a man in the top 10 scorers.

Brian Propp of Brandon continues to hold a comfortable lead over all challengers. He has 150 points and, with a league-leading 93 assists, is on the verge of tying the single season power-play assists mark of 47 set by Kevin McCarthy of Winnipeg Monarchs last year.

Propp has 46 power play assists.

Chynoweth Threatens To Retire

BRANDON (CP) — Ed Chynoweth, president of the Western Canada Hockey League, has told the league's board of governors he plans to resign effective June 15.

Bob Cornell, acting chairman of the board and president of the Brandon Wheat Kings, made the announcement Monday night.

Chynoweth, who has held the president's job for the last five years, confirmed his plans later in a telephone interview from his home in Calgary.

"It wasn't an easy decision, nor was it made on the spur of the moment," he told the Brandon Sun. "I've been giving it serious thought for about the past three or four months."

Chynoweth said he wrote his letter of resignation Feb. 15 to give the board as much time as possible to look for a successor.

"I leave with no hard feelings," he said. "But there comes a time when a job is no longer any fun. It was a matter of me just running out of steam."

Cornell, speaking for the board of governors, said he was shocked and disappointed by Chynoweth's decision.

"His loss will be a tremendous blow, not only to our league, but to the Canadian Major Junior Hokcey League and to junior hockey in Canada on the whole."

Cornell said the WCHL would discuss a successor for Chynoweth at a league meeting in Calgary on March 13.

Cole Rink Leads

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Edmonton's Betty Cole overcame "strange" ice and a late-night finish Monday to go into today's three-draw program at the head of the Canadian women's curling championship.

The Alberta crew leads the 11-rink, round-robin tournament on the strength of some clutch shooting by the skip in a 12-6 victory over Quebec's Carole Topp.

The fourth-round matchup Monday night took more than three hours.

The Cole rink is unbeaten in three games.

The Alberta squad was rated among the early favorites, along with the Manitoba crew skipped by Cathy Pidzarko of Stony Mountain, which came off a 10-2 drubbing by Newfoundland in the afternoon to shell Gloria Basha of Charlottetown, representing Prince Edward Island, 11-3 at night.

In other Monday night matchups, Penny LaRoque of Dartmouth led her Nova Scotians to a 13-3 win over Newfoundland, represented by Sue-Anne Bartlett of Labrador City, Charlene Goodwin of Saskatoon got three in the 10th end to lift Saskatchewan past Karen McDermott's New Brunswick entry from Bathurst, 9-8 and Donna Alexander's Whitehorse foursome from the Yukon-Northwest Territories finally triumphed, 13-4, over Heather Haywood's British Columbia team from Burnaby.

The other third-round matches in the afternoon saw Alberta beat the Territories 7-2; New Brunswick take out P.E.I. 7-4. Quebec defeat Saskatchewan 6-4 and Nova Scotia topple Sheila Seltzer of London, 8-7.

Gulls Win Opener By Wide Margin

Juan de Fuca King John's Gulls aren't leaving much to chance.

Gulls blasted Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking 21-1 Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena in the opening game of the best-of-seven Peart Division consolation series in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Guy Moran set the pace for Gulls with six goals while Dale McLachlan added four and Lee Putney, John Horne, Jeff Whitney-Griffiths and Mike Milligan added two each. Singles were contributed by Tom Wilson, Kevin Kellington and Dave Kjolberg.

Ron Augustine spoiled Ken Shaw's shutout bid by scoring the lone Lake Cowichan goal at 11:19 of the third period.

The second game of the series is scheduled for Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Lake Cowichan Arena while the opening game of the Patterson Division championship series between Saanich Braves and Fuller Lake Flyers, another best-of-seven affair, gets underway at 7:30 tonight at Pearkes Arena.

Athletics On Top

Victoria Athletics assumed the front-running position in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League by tripping Techline Copy Centre 86-76 Monday at Central Junior High School.

Tom Holmes dunked 16 points to set the pace for Athletics, who upped their record to 15-4. Rich Connolly and Duff McCachey added 10 points each.

Fifth-ranked Techline, now 6-12, were led by an 18-point effort from John Lauvaas.

In senior "C" play the same night, Bruce Lubenich fired 22 points to lead Home Lumber to a 70-69 decision over Fairburn.

FOUR PLAYERS BEAT REF

EDMUNDSTON, N.B. (CP) — RCMP here are investigating the beating of a referee during an Upper Madawaska Hockey League game at nearby Saint-Basile.

League President Roger Michaud said in an interview Monday that stiff suspensions would be handed out to four Baker Brook players who were involved in the Sunday incident that sent referee Fernand Bonnefant to hospital with a possible skull fracture.

Bonnefant's doctor said the referee was improving but would be detained in hospital for at least three days of observation.

Michaud, who was in the stands during the attack, said the incident was "the worst I've ever seen."

"One player held Bonnefant by the arms while the other three players began punching him with their fists and hitting him with their hockey sticks.

Bonnefant, who lost his helmet during the incident, left the ice after a spectator intervened. When he returned moments later, he was struck over the head with a stick, Michaud said.

The referee was knocked unconscious by the blow and did not come to for about an hour, the president said.

The president said the league, with players aged 17 years or older, folded a few years ago because of violence and had resumed operation only this year.

The five-team league prohibits body-checking.

District Golfers Ignore Free Equipment Check

Victoria golfers, it would appear, do not think very much of their games.

Victoria Club professional Paul Trapp purchased a loft-and-lie machine late last year. Valued about $3,500, and the first of its kind on Vancouver Island, it is no toy.

It accurately determines proper club length required and can pinpoint variances in lofts. Even so-called "matched sets" of irons, newly purchased, can have a variance in their lofts.

A few weeks before Christmas, and that being the quiet time of the year in the pro shops, Trapp took out advertisments to announce that he would test, free of charge, clubs for anyone interested. If adjustments were needed, they could have been made at a nominal price of $3 per club.

It's been three months since Trapp offered his free service.

The offer was made to all golfers in the district, and not just club members. Not one outsider has taken advantage of the service.

Little wonder, then, Paul is shaking his head in astonishment.

The district's hotshots would never think of teeing up a ball that has been stamped with a "smile." They would quickly exchange the cut ball for another.

Same hotshots, however, are content to play with clubs that may be less than perfect. For example, a seven iron with a loft that would actually make it behave like a 7½ iron. And etcetera.

Trapp doesn't expect you to deprive the baby of milk in order to pay for the adjustments.

Still, wouldn't it be nice to know exactly what to expect out of your clubs?

The offer is still there. . .for high handicappers, the average and the hotshots. None of whom, the record shows, gives a darn about his or her equipment.

* * *

The entire slate of officers on the Victoria District Golf Committee has been returned to serve district golfers in 1978.

At Monday's annual meeting at Gorge Vale, Uplands' Bob Bell went back in as president; Bill Halbert of Colwood was returned as vice-president; Leo Derman, as always, was quickly railroaded into the secretary's position, and Bob Peters of Colwood remains as treasurer.

For Derman, it will be his 26th consecutive year as secretary.

It was one of the speediest meetings on record, despite an informative report of Royal Canadian Golf Association activities and plans by Vancouver's Jim Gibson. But Gibson, who is getting to be a regular at District Committee meetings, fell into the spirit of things and made his report brief and to the point.

The past year was a banner year for the district committee. It showed a profit of $1,460 — one of the largest in recent years. Sponsorship of the City Amateur and City Junior events by Jim Taylor contributed to the healthy surplus.

Every district tournament in 1977 showed a profit except the Inter-Club competition for the Willie Park Driver.

SHORT CHIPS: The pleasure of playing golf in Victoria, as Doug Grove will testity, is being allowed to record the first hole-in-one of the year in Canada. . .Grove's ace on Cedar Hill's 15th hole on Jan. 6 has been dutifully recorded as the nation's first in 1978. . .More recently, Gord Campbell scored an ace on the second. . .Roy Gleig, the long-time pro at Chilliwack, is retiring this year. . .

Halifax Sailor Leads

RIO DE JANEIRO (CP) — Defending champion Glen Dexter of Halifax led from start to finish Monday to win the third race of the world Soling championship with Hans Fogh of Toronto placing third. Dexter, at the helm of Delusions, crossed the finish line two minutes ahead of runner-up Gastao Brun of Brazil, skipper of Revolution.

Peter Hall of Montreal, at the helm of Obelix, was 12th Monday and Rick Brooks-Hill of Vancouver, skipper of Fro and Flo, placed 20th. William Abbott of Sarnia, Ont., guided Bits-n-Pieces to a 22nd-place finish.

Delusions now is in third place over-all after the three events with 13 penalty points, while Fogh's yacht, Landed Immigrant, is seventh with 18.7 points.

"I think it needs some protein to give it more 'body'."

Another UVic runner, Debbie O'Connor, finished second in the 800.

All four athletes have already qualified for the Canadian university championships scheduled for Montreal this weekend.

Meanwhile, Olympic runner Dan Biocchi highlighted the meet by setting a Canadian 300-metre record of 34.1 seconds.

The University of Alberta student had already broken his own Canadian record of 34.5 by running the 300 metres in 34.3 seconds on Friday.

Wrexham Ends Run by Blyth

LONDON (Reuter) — Wrexham took a 2-1 victory Monday over Blyth Spartans to end the minor league club's run in the English Football Association Cup playoffs.

But the Spartans put up such a good fight in the fifth-round soccer at Newcastle that the crowd of 42,267, outnumbering the population of the club's nearby home town of Blyth by 6,000, gave them a standing ovation at the end.

Nottingham Forest—with a chance to win the Cup, the English League and the League Cup—will have to battle through another replay after being held to a 1-1 draw by Queen's Park Rangers after extra time.

Second Division club Orient shocked its fellow Londoners Chelsea, of the First Division, with a 2-1 decision. That advanced Orient to the quarter-finals against Middlesbrough which beat Bolton Wanderers 2-0.

Blyth, which had played 11 matches and about 1,000 minutes of soccer to reach this stage in the Cup, saw its hopes of a home clash with favorite Arsenal in the quarter-finals recede as early as the eighth minute of Monday's match.

In Scotland, Rangers scored three goals in extra time to overwhelm Forfar Athletic 5-2 in the semi-finals of the Scottish League Cup.

Celtic, holders of the Scottish FA Cup, was held to a 1-1 draw by Kilmarnock in the fourth round. The winner meets Rangers.

NIXON EDITOR NOT TV STAR

WASHINGTON (UPI) — David Frost is helping edit Richard Nixon's memoirs. But that's David Frost, a Grosset and Dunlop copyreader — not David Frost, television personality and interviewer.

Jack Brennan, the former president's spokesman, denied a report in Monday's New York Trib that David Frost is helping alter the text of the book as a result of publication of H. R. Haldeman's "The Ends of Power."

"We haven't read Bob's book," Brennan said in a telephone interview. He said "not one word" in Nixon's work has been changed as a result of the Haldeman version.

And he said the David Frost who is helping edit Nixon's memoirs, expected to be published in May, is not the Frost of television fame but a copyreader for the publishers.

Brennan said copyreader Frost has been working for several months with Nixon and others on the manuscript.

Nixon Tricks In New Book

NEW YORK (AP)—Watergate conspirator Jeb Magruder says former president Richard Nixon's use of federal agencies to harass persons who opposed his policies was part of a plan to establish a "perpetual presidency," The Trib reports.

Unidentified sources provided the newspaper a manuscript of Magruder's book, From Power to Peace, which is to be published in May by Word Publishing Co., Trib managing editor Guy Jeffries said.

The Magruder selections printed by the Trib claim Nixon "was so convinced that his kind of administration was better for the country than anything the Democrats could offer, that he wanted to pick his successors.

"That meant two things: a Republican candidate had to be able to win elections—we just proved that could be done; and he had to be able to destroy opposition candidates—we were well on our way to doing that."

To do that, Magruder said, Nixon wanted to use the Federal Communications Commission, the Internal Revenue Service and other agencies to dig up "skeletons, however minor or ancient, in opposition political closets," and leak the reports to the news media.

Magruder was found guilty of one count of conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States. He served seven months of a 10-month to four-year prison sentence.

Aussies' Pay Up

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — Australia's six million wage and salary earners received a pay boost today to compensate for the latest rise in the cost of living.

The National Arbitration Commission, which examines and fixes workers' pay every three months in relation to rises in the consumer price index (CPI), announced the average wage earner would receive a raise of $2.60 ($2.95 U.S.) a week.

The increase boosts the average weekly wage in Australia to $208.10 ($236 U.S.).

The commission granted a flat $2.60 ($2.95 U.S.) raise to workers earning more than $170 ($193 U.S.) a week.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

Do you think you are preparing for your retirement? Are you paying into a pension fund? Is it indexed?

If the answers to the above questions are yes, then you are a rare bird. If the answer to the third question is no, then the answer to the first is also no.

You cannot live long on a non-indexed pension. Watch what happens. At 5 per cent inflation (do you remember?), a pension of 70 per cent of the best six years' earnings declines to 44 per cent of final earnings after five years and 34 per cent after 10 years. At a final salary of $10,232, that gives $5,645 upon retirement at 65 years, or 55 per cent of the termination salary; $4,423 or 43 per cent of the termination salary at age 70 and $3,466 or 34 per cent of the last working salary at age 75. Can you afford to live on half your present salary or less?

Take a more realistic rate of inflation in view of current trends, say 8 per cent. Try that on the same pension plan. $5,645 upon retirement or 70 per cent of the final best six years' earnings becomes $3,842 or 38 per cent of final earnings at age 70. At age 75, it has dropped to $2,614 or 26 per cent of final earnings. Can you live on that?

The Public Service Alliance of Canada has taken the position that ALL Canadians must have indexed pensions. If you agree, write your MP, inform your employer. Tell them that indexed pensions are not a privilege, they are a necessity.

This ad is sponsored by the Public Service Alliance of Canada, representing 177,000 Canadian taxpayers and union members.

Soviet 'Unionists' Missing, Detained

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A group of Soviet workers who formed an independent "trade union" said Monday two members have been sent to psychiatric hospitals and the founder and four others are missing, presumed detained.

Group members Valentin Poplavsky and Varvara Kycherenko, both of them held by police earlier this month, told Western reporters they believe KGB security police are trying to disband union of dissident workers by arresting and intimidating members.

Zoologist Yevgeni Nikolaev and worker Valentina Pelekh have been committed to psychiatric detention, they said.

The group's founder, Vladimir Klebanov, a 46-year-old miner from the Donbass region of the Ukraine, disappeared in Moscow about two weeks ago, they added. They could not confirm earlier reports that he is in psychiatric detention in his hometown.

The whereabouts of four other members of the union, formed by 43 workers from several cities who claimed to have been unfairly fired, also is unknown, the workers said.

241 AT N-TESTS NOW 'HAVE CANCER'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of 241 persons claiming to have witnessed nuclear tests between 1946 and 1963 have told the U.S. Defence Nuclear Agency they have cancer, the Pentagon said Monday.

The 241 are among about 13,000 who have called the agency over the last two weeks to report they were present at one or more of the test explosions in the Nevada desert and the Pacific.

Pentagon officials said they are unable to say whether this is a normal or abnormal incidence of cancer, but said that "preliminary data provides no indication of whether exposure to low-level ionizing radiation is biomedically damaging."

The defence department said there is no breakdown of the types of cancer reported by the 241 persons.

The depatment hopes to identify as many as possible of an estimated 250,000 to 300,000 former military and civilian personnel reported to have been at atmospheric nuclear tests before they were banned by a U.S.-Soviet treaty.

Data collected by the department will be turned over to scientific agencies which will attempt to determine whether there is a linkage between exposure to radiation in the doses experienced during the 1946-1963 tests and the incidence of cancer among those who were there.

Cuba in Eritrea In Combat Role?

ROME (AP) — Cuban soldiers have joined combat for the first time against rebels battling for independence in Ethiopia's northern Eritrea province, the insurgents said Monday.

Cubans already have been reported fighting alongside Ethiopian troops in their Ogaden war against Somali secessionists.

Amde Michael Kahsai, spokesman for the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF), said in Rome that 1,000 Cubans joined Ethiopian defenders in the Eritrean capital of Asmara for an unsuccessful attempt to crack the five-month rebel siege of the city.

Kahsai said EPLF intelligence in Asmara reported that Cuban troops fired heavy artillery and rocket launchers as the Ethiopians tried to break out to the south, suffering heavy losses. Asmara, population 300,000, is perched on a 2,200-metre plateau 64 kilometres from the Red Sea.

The rebels claimed earlier that Cuban advisers are present on the Eritrean front. Western intelligence sources in Kenya reported earlier in February that 500 Cubans have been dispatched to Eritrea.

In Washington, the U.S. state department issued a statement Monday saying: "We have reports that there are Cuban personnel present in Eritrea as advisers and pilots. We fear that they could become involved in combat but have no confirmation that this has already occurred."

U.S. intelligence has reported that more than 10,000 Cuban soldiers, several thousand Soviet and other foreign troops are in Ethiopia, with the Cubans directly involved in fighting the ethnic Somali rebels who seek to unite Ethiopia's southeastern Ogaden desert with Somalia. The Cubans are reported to be flying air missions in the Ogaden, as well.

If the Soviet-Cuban-Ethiopian counteroffensive in the Ogaden succeeds in driving out the insurgents who once claimed to hold 95 per cent of the region, Western intelligence sources say, more Cubans might be freed to fight in Eritrea. The former Italian colony was annexed to Ethiopia in 1962 to give the East African country access to the sea.

Coffee Financing Idi's Arms

GLASSBORO, N.J. (AP) — Millions of dollars in coffee purchases by the United States have been used by Ugandan President Idi Amin to buy Soviet arms to kill more than 250,000 Ugandans, a former Ugandan administrative aide said Monday.

Former Ugandan health minister Henry Kyemba, who defected to Britain in May, 1977, said Amin receives a "continuous flow" of money through more than $400 million in coffee sales to the United States. Kyemba said the sales amounted to 90 per cent of Uganda's foreign exchange.

"Let Amin teach the Russians to drink coffee," Kyemba said. "Let him try to sell his coffee there. Don't let him have access to the rich American market."

Kyemba, speaking at a news conference at Glassboro State College, said the United States and Britain are being racist by continuing silence on Ugandan atrocities.

"I, and the Ugandan people, have no doubt that President Carter and the American people hate the Ugandan government, but what makes us uneasy is that their commitments to human rights are not being carried out into action," Kyemba said.

He said economic sanctions would weaken Amin enough for Ugandans to rebel.

Kyemba, technically still vice-president of the World Health Organization, said there are not getting enough news in the United States about the atrocities in Uganda.

Kyemba said Amin has put a $4-million price on his head for speaking out against the regime.

Kyemba said one-half of Amin's 20 cabinet ministers are former cab drivers and garbagemen.

Soviet Subs In Baltic?

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The Soviet Union has stationed six submarines in the Baltic Sea armed with intermediate-range nuclear missiles that apparently would be intended for European targets, Foreign Minister Karin Soder claims.

Mrs. Soder said the subs were stationed permanently in the Baltic last year.

"During a number of years we have witnessed with alarm that different kinds of nuclear weapons have been stationed closer and closer to the Nordic area and now also in the Baltic," she said.

$250 Million Loan

CAIRO (AFP) — The United States signed an agreement Monday to lend Egypt $250 million to finance this year's imports from the U.S., The Middle East News Agency reported. The loan forms part of the record $1-billion facility granted by the U.S. to Egypt this year.

Gandhi Scores At Polls Again

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The governing Janata party emerged today as the strongest single party in assembly elections in the large western Indian state of Maharashtra, salvaging some of its damaged electoral reputation.

But the party, humbled by electoral successes of former prime minister Indira Gandhi's new Indira Congress party in the important southern states of Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh, did not obtain a majority.

With two results still to come in Maharashtra, the Janata party has won 98 of the 286 seats declared. It would need 145 legislative assembly members to form a government in the state.

Mrs. Gandhi's party did unexpectedly well in Maharashtra, winning 62 seats so far—seven less than the Official Congress which held power in the state before the election.

This solid performance by Mrs. Gandhi was another blow to the Official Congress party and gave Mrs. Gandhi the status of India's most-powerful opposition leader.

Mrs. Gandhi's triumphs have led to the resignation of the Official Congress president, Brahmananda Reddi, and to speculation that the official wing may lose many supporters.

RETALIATION THREAT IN AIR ROW

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) said Monday it is prepared to take retaliatory action if Britain does not allow Braniff Airways to start low-fare flights from Texas to London on Wednesday.

The CAB also said it has decided not to give Braniff permission to begin services at higher fares demanded by the British Civil Aviation Authority (CAA).

Announcement of the decisions followed a closed door meeting of the CAB and it is certain to cause another government-to-government squabble over transatlantic flights policy.

Braniff wants to begin services on the Dallas-Fort Worth-to-London route, which it was awarded by President Carter last year, with a low roundtrip standby fare of $349.

The CAA is insisting that the lowest fare be $409.

A statement issued after the meeting said:

"The CAB met in closed session to consider what options if any it might take in view of the British government's continuing refusal to allow Braniff Airways to inaugurate Dallas-Fort Worth-London service on March 1 at the low fares proposed by Braniff.

"The Board gave instructions to the staff to prepare an order taking reciprocal action consistent with its authority under the Federal Aviation Act."

Space Calling UN . . .

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — A Soviet delegate Monday suggested consideration of whether messages to extra-terrestrial civilizations should be channelled through an international body, such as the United Nations, so that they would be representative of all mankind.

"It seems to me that is an extremely important question," N. K. Vinnichenko told the scientific and technical subcommittee of the UN Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space.

"However fantastically distant it seems from our earthly cares today, we should realize that if such a communication can be established in the near future—and this is something we cannot exclude—it would really change our psychology and our attitude to general human matters," he said.

Park To Start Talking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tongsun Park, accused South Korean influence buyer, is going behind closed doors for questioning to determine whether any U.S. congressmen should be punished for taking his money.

The onetime Washington party-giver was to begin talking to investigators of the House of Representatives ethics committee under tight security today and give public testimony in the future.

Investigators want details on alleged payments of $100,000 or more to several former congressmen, and on campaign and office account contributions to at least 24 senators and House members.

Park pleaded not guilty Monday to 36 criminal counts of bribery and trying to buy influence in Congress with cash, gifts and parties as an agent of the South Korean government.

He was arraigned even though the justice department has agreed to drop those charges in exchange for his testimony against other defendants.

The millionaire businessman pledged after his arrival in Washington Sunday that he'll do his best to help the investigators "get to the bottom of everything so that complete truth will come out."

Park contends he did nothing wrong—saying he gave only legal contributions to congressmen who were friends and who asked.

He also denied having been an agent of the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency and having disbursed the money as an agent for Seoul.

Park is likely to testify next month at the trial of former representative Richard Hanna (Dem. Calif.), indicted on charges of conspiring with Park to try to buy influence in Congress.

Victim Bled To Death

A 23-year-old man bled to death after being stabbed in the heart, a B.C. Supreme Court murder trial was told Monday.

Pathologist Dr. Garth Walther was testifying at the first day of the trial of Ervin Ray Beebe, 33, of North Saanich, accused of second degree murder by stabbing James Struik shortly after midnight Dec. 18 outside the Golden Bear Tavern in Sidney.

The case is being heard by a jury of seven women and five men and is being presided over by Mr. Justice Richard Anderson.

Walther described Struik as "well developed," weighing 204 pounds and standing six feet. His autospy disclosed three wounds — one to the heart, one in the groin and one in the lower part of a leg.

He said almost half Struik's blood would have had escaped into the chest cavity from the heart wound.

It was possible he could have lived for several minutes but not more than 10 minutes.

Asked if the heart wound was consistent with being caused by a jackknife or penknife, he said "in my opinion, that is right."

He said "it's quite possible" that a reddish mark on Beebe's head may have resulted in a concussion.

Walther said it was possible the stab wound was caused by someone lying on the ground with Struik stooping over him. But a little later he also said it was "quite possible" that the chest wound was consistent with the person being in a standing position.

Dr. Peter Dutton, who examined Beebe in RCMP cells about 13 hours after the incident, said the man complained of a headache and pain in the cheek, jaw and right ribs. X-rays later showed no fractures.

He said Beebe had a black eye, an abrasion over the right cheek bone and bruising on the right side of the top of his head.

He said the blow which produced the head bruising would have been "moderately hard" and "I would be surprised if it was caused by a fist."

Dutton said he concluded that Beebe had had a mild concussion earlier.

Cpl. David Smith of the RCMP, who took photographs of the scene, said Beebe appeared "not really aware" what was going on around him when he was at the Sidney detachment office.

Cpl. Melvin McIntosh of the RCMP said he administered a breathalyzer test to Beebe around 3.45 a.m. Dec. 18 and the blood-alcohol content was .01, or one-eighth of what the Criminal Code considers to be impairment.

He said Beebe "appeared to be in some sort of a daze."

Asked if a murder weapon was ever found, he said "no, it never was."

Const. Bruce Bowman of the RCMP said he found Beebe lying on his bed on his boat at a marina at 2:05 a.m. Dec. 18. He said Beebe had an injury to his right eye and dressed himself with difficulty. He appeared "disoriented."

The trial was to continue today and was expected to last most of the week.

'Can't Get Farm from Rock'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

When is farmland not farmland?

According to the owners of nine properties in the Blenkinsop Valley, when it's largely rock, gravel, clay and poor-quality soil that's unfit for any kind of economic agricultural use.

Their opinions, expressed at a Saanich public hearing Monday night, directly conflicted with the views of soil experts in the provincial ministry of agriculture and also of the B.C. Land Commission.

The latter had recommended that the parcels totalling 51 acres be included in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR) which already covers much of the 1,000-acre valley.

But faced with the contradiction, Saanich council decided that pending further investigation it will abandon its application to the provincial cabinet seeking ALR designation for the properties.

At least one of the objectors, Dr. A.G. Richards, 4589 Blenkinsop, issued an invitation for aldermen to see for themselves whether the land in question is fit for farming.

Richards claimed that except for about two acres of arable land on which he grows hay for horses, most of his 35-acre parcel is rock and forest.

"If any members of council want to don their climbing gear and rope themselves together I will gladly take them over it," he offered.

"There's an old saying that you can't get blood from a stone," he added. "But equally, you can't get farmland out of rock."

Lawyer Robert Price, representing six property owners in the valley, said a considerable portion of the land proposed for inclusion in the reserve is part of the "rocky outcropping from Mount Douglas" and renders farming impracticable.

He charged that there had been inadequate investigation of the land's farming potential, and also that the Land Commission Act was being used improperly in this case to obtain an area of greenbelt in which land values could be depressed so that some day the property could be purchased at a low price for public use.

Greenbelt doesn't require hundreds of acres to be set aside, he argued. Saanich should designate a relatively narrow strip flanking Blenkinsop, ask the provincial government to purchase it and leave the rest to the owners "to do with it what they want to do."

Margo Ney, 4856 Cordova Bay, said only about half of her 16.6-acre property is suitable for cultivation, and the area which isn't should be excluded from the farmland reserve.

Don Smith, president of the recently revived Blenkinsop Valley Ratepayers' Association, urged council to hold a referendum to see whether taxpayers are willing to acquire the valley's 1,000 acres and homes, at a cost which could be as high as $20 million.

Ald. Howard Sturrock said there would have to be much more investigation of the properties concerned before he could support their inclusion in the reserve, and Ald. David Paterson commented that it was unfair to expect Blenkinsop land owners to preserve their land for the enjoyment of future generations.

The only fair action, he said, would be to acquire it with greenbelt protection funds.

Ald. John Mika was heartily booed when he commented that he still believes the valley "certainly has agricultural potential and is certainly one of the chief agricultural areas in our municipality now."

But Mika agreed that council had been presented with "two diametrically opposite versions of what exists."

In other public hearing business Monday night, council:

— Rejected an application to rezone property at 4339 Columbia Place from single-family to duplex, after hearing numerous objections from nearby residents.

— Approved rezoning from rural classification to single-family for part of the Nutter holly farm property at the southwest corner of Mount Douglas Cross Road and Cedar Hill. Once the rezoning bylaw is finally adopted, the owner will be eligible to apply for subdivision of the 1.5-acre site to 7,200-square-foot lots.

— Tabled for two months, to enable further traffic and engineering studies, an application to rezone property at 4583 Wilkinson for church use. The 6.8-acre site is adjacent to Royal Oak junior secondary school.

Go-It-Alone On Industry?

Saanich is shying away from the proposal for a light industrial park in the Royal Oak area and is considering the creation of its own industrial park free of speculative profits.

Mayor Mel Couvelier told Saanich Rotarians Monday the go-it-alone approach will ensure that serviced industrial land comes on the market at a price which will compete with industrially-zoned acreage on the Lower Mainland.

"I believe it is time for a courageous council to acquire 100 to 150 acres, zone it adequately and market it at cost to purchasers prepared to build within specific time frames. This would be done for a serviced cost of close to $2 a square foot," he said.

If the buyers did not develop the land within the stipulated time, surcharges would be applied so that the municipality would benefit from any speculative profits rather than individual property owners.

"Such a decision would require a courageous council because it would be turning its back on the $10 million windfalls now expected by Royal Oak developers, and would also mean facing down the anticipated objections of nearby residents to any new industrial site.

"If it means hanging the speculator out to dry — so be it."

Couvelier said a preliminary report on the proposal for a Saanich-owned industrial park would be presented to council before the March 22 public hearing on the plan to create an additional 100 acres of light industrial land in the Glanford-Vanalman area.

In his address to the service club the mayor reiterated earlier concerns about the tenfold increase in Royal Oak land values over the past five years.

He noted that land available for $11,000 an acre in 1973 today commands a price of $110,000 an acre, although not a cent of value has been added to justify such an increase.

He said while an industrial park there won't cost the municipality anything, the high market price of $4.50 to $5 per square foot would probably mean a delay of five to 10 years before Saanich derived any substantial tax revenue.

"I do not believe we should accept such a delay merely because speculation has bled off so much incremental value," he said.

"It is sad that vacillating councils allowed so much time for that degree of price escalation to occur."

But Couvelier indicated that the vacillating is over.

"I fully expect the 16-year-long issue to be resolved very shortly one way or the other."

TAX REBATERS FACING CHARGES

The provincial government intends to prosecute income tax rebate-buying firms which thought they had found a loophole in recently-passed legislation, a government spokesman said Monday.

Under a law passed during the last session of the legislature, tax buyers are limited to charging no more than 15 per cent of tax rebates owing their customers.

At least two Vancouver firms, however, have been indirectly charging more by forcing the customer to pay for having his form filled in by an associated company.

In addition, the firms have been holding back 25 per cent more until the federal government validates the rebate claim.

A spokesman for the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs said the firms are breaking the law and will be charged, and so will any other firm found doing the same thing.

He said that as soon as the ministry's investigation into the matter is concluded later this week, the findings will be sent to Ottawa to back up B.C.'s argument that tax rebate cheques should be payable only to the taxpayer or at least only to reputable firms such as banks, credit unions, and loan and trust companies.

Persons convicted of an offence under the Consumer Protection Act, which regulates rebate buyers, are liable to a fine not exceeding $2,000 or to imprisonment for a term of not more than one year, or to both. In addition, a corporation may be fined $25,000.

CHILDREN ARE 'MOST UNFIT'

TORONTO (CP) — Former Olympic athlete Abby Hoffman says children—not adults—are Canada's most unfit people.

Miss Hoffman told delegates at a conference of the Ontario Association for the Supervision of Physical and Health Education on Sunday that parents, school boards and even organizers of the federally-sponsored Participaction program have all missed the point.

Miss Hoffman, a consultant to the Ontario ministry of culture and recreation, said the fitness of Canadian school children starts to deteriorate "as soon as they sit behind a school desk."

She said a recent fitness study of 10,000 school-age children in Manitoba showed 25 per cent of them were overweight by the time they reached Grade 6. Studies also show that almost 80 per cent of all female students are overweight by the time they reach Grade 12, she said.

Miss Hoffman said many Ontario schools are giving young students a raw deal in fitness training, allowing them to slide into a flabby state that would dominate the rest of their lives.

"Some enlightened schools are featuring regular 10-minute fitness hustles in the classroom every day and that is first-rate, but it should be mandatory everywhere," she said.

She said virtually no mention is made of fitness training in the province's compulsory curriculum guidelines for classes up to Grade 6 and that the Participaction program is aiming most of its television advertisements at adults.

Another Kind of Toilet

By A. J. HAND

Copyright 1978, Popular Science

The development of the flush toilet and the closed sewage system is one of man's greatest accomplishments. It is in large part responsible for today's high standards of health throughout the modern world. But the system is not without its drawbacks.

It uses a tremendous amount of water. In many cases it causes water pollution on a massive scale. That's not all. In many parts of the United States and Canada, there are no municipal sewer systems. Individual homes have their own septic systems. But not all land is well suited to the installation of such systems. Rocky land or poorly drained land can make the installation of a septic system expensive, or even impossible. I should know. I recently spent several thousand dollars for a new system.

A new solution to these problems is the composting toilet. It decomposes wastes instead of discharging them into the environment. The end product in most cases is germ-free compost. And the composting toilet uses no water.

Composting toilets come in two basic types. There are relatively large units that require little maintenance, have few working parts and can handle the wastes of up to 10 people. These big units are fairly difficult to install — because of their bulk — and cost well over $1,000.

The second type usually costs around $800. It is smaller, and easier to install. But it has less capacity, and usually requires electricity to run mixing devices and heating elements that maintain optimum temperatures for composting.

Clivus Multrum, a Swedish design shown in the sketch, is fairly typical of the large composting toilets. Essentially it is a large composting tank made of fibreglass. Connected to it is a direct-feeding toilet, and an optional chute for kitchen wastes.

In use, human and kitchen wastes drop into the tank where bacteria break them down into gases and humus. The gases pass out an exhaust duct leading through your roof, and you empty the humus at the rate of a few gallons every other year.

The smaller units work on the same principle. But since they are smaller they make use of those mixers and heaters mentioned earlier to speed the composting process along. Generally, they must be emptied more often than the big units. Still, once or twice a year should do it.

Of course composting toilets have drawbacks, just as flush toilets do. They are not simple flush-and-forget appliances. You have to monitor them and keep the biological balance right, especially during the break-in period. The smaller units can clog up now and then, and are subject to overloading if too many people use them.

All cost much more than an ordinary toilet. But when you add in the cost of the sewage or septic system you'd need with a flush toilet, the price of a composter will seem attractively low.

Who makes them? The large units are available from Clivus Multrum U.S.A. Inc., 14 A Eliot St., Cambridge, Mass., 02138; Enviroscope, Inc., Box 752, Corona del Mar, Calif., 92625. Smaller units are sold by Clivus Multrum; Bio-Utility Systems, Inc., Box 135, Narberth, Pa. 19072; ASI Environment Div., 2 Industrial Parkway, Woburn, Mass. 01801; Recreation Ecology Conservation of U.S., Inc., 9809 W. Bluemound Rd., Milwaukee, Wis. 53226.

(In Victoria, the smaller Clivus units are available through some department stores.)

Note: The local health and plumbing codes in your area may not allow composting toilets, or may not even recognize their existence. Be sure to check with local authorities before making any installation.

No Guarantee

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for three months and we just had our first big fight.

It all started when I mentioned to him that I had read that the longest marriage on record was 86 years! My husband then replied that 25 years is our limit — and no more.

Abby, I got married for life and I hoped that he did, too, so this really got me upset.

Then he said, "You should be pleased with a guarantee of 25 years."

What do you say, Abby?

V.V.

DEAR B.: Nobody has a "guarantee" that he'll wake up tomorrow morning, so your husband's "guarantee" of a 25-year-long marriage doesn't mean much.

Live your life one day at a time, and if your husband tells you after 25 years that your "guarantee" has run out, write again, and if I'm still around (and I hope I am), I'll help you deal with it.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been divorced for 15 years. She's 63 and a nice-looking woman. Last month the man with whom she has been going for two years moved in with her. (He's also divorced.)

She says they love each other but if they get married they'll lose their welfare and Medicare benefits.

I am married and have a wonderful family. I disapprove of my mother living in sin with this man and have refused to visit her. She lives only a few miles from me.

She said if I loved her, I would "understand" and visit her. I've told her that she is welcome to come to my home, but I'm not going to hers.

Do you think I'm right?

DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: You have a right to disapprove of your mother's lifestyle, but it's not your place to "judge" and punish "sins." That's the Lord's job. ("Hate the sin but love the sinner.")

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 45-year-old widow in love with a 47-year-old widower I'll call Bill.

Bill's wife died four years ago and left him with a daughter who is now 12. (I'll call her Betsy.) The problem is the way Betsy feels about me. She's insanely jealous. Bill once kissed the back of my neck while helping me on with my coat and Betsy became hysterical. She yelled and screamed and cursed me, saying, "You will NEVER take my mother's place!" It took Bill an hour to calm her down.

Whenever we three drive anywhere, Betsy has to sit between us. When we three are together, Betsy sulks and looks at me with hate in her eyes. Until recently, Betsy slept with her father, but I told him I thought it was very unhealthy so he stopped it.

Bill is begging me to marry him. He says Betsy will outgrow her jealousy after we're married, and she will learn to love me, but I'm afraid to take a chance. I really love Bill and don't want to give him up. Please help me.

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: Tell Bill that unless (and until) he gets Betsy to a psychotherapist for some counselling, and her sick attitude changes, marriage between you would be a disaster. (He could also use some therapy.) Under no circumstances should you marry Bill with the situation that now exists. If he doesn't agree to getting help for Betsy, say goodbye. And don't look back.

Life One Big Party For Mary Smalley

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mary Smalley's job is the stuff of dreams. She spends her days and nights touring picturesque San Francisco Bay at the helm of her own yacht, serving elegant dinner parties.

Ms. Smalley runs a yacht charter service, renting the 68-foot, twin-diesel Mariner II for four hours at a time, usually to big corporations.

"What is amazing to me is that every corporate executive who comes aboard Mariner II asks endless questions about the operational side of my business and finally admits he'd like to resign his position and spend the rest of his life as a charter boat skipper," she said.

"They view it as pure escape. Believe me, it isn't, although I can't think of anything else I'd rather be doing right now."

When her airline executive husband died four years ago, Ms. Smalley used the estate settlement to buy the 1969-model vessel and spruce it up.

"When I told my banker about my boat scheme, he laughed, and my lawyer said I was out of my tree," she said with a chuckle. "But, somehow, I knew I had to do it."

She installed oriental rugs, a bar, television, stereo and a galley to whip up gourmet meals. "We have several menus but visitors prefer the seafood to the ethnic dinners we offer."

Obtaining Coast Guard certification to get liability insurance, she hired seven persons to help her prepare the meals and serve the guests as the yacht cruises past Alcatraz, Angel Island and the Oakland estuary.

Meals cost $20 a person and usually include such delicacies as cracked crab, oysters on the half-shell, ginger chicken and sauteed scallops. An open bar costs $10 a person and the rental of the vessel is $125 an hour, with a four-hour minimum.

"Having a party for 30 people, using that menu, would run around $1,400, including taxes and tip," she said. "It would run about the same at any first-rate restaurant, without the scenery and the invigorating salt air."

Casting an eye to the orange-tinted Golden Gate Bridge, Ms. Smalley mused, "We never go outside the Golden Gate because it can get too rough and there is so much to see inside the Gate."

In two years of operation, only two guests have been seasick. Another had too much to drink and stumbled into the bay as he disembarked.

In England, however, it's well thought of as low-cost enrichment for the stick-to-your-ribs puddings which the British enjoy in cold weather. Now that food prices are up and thermostats are turned down here in the U.S. and Canada . . . well, perhaps it's time we learned to relish suet too.

Get fresh, membrane-free suet from your butcher and remove any stringy tissues as you cut the fat apart. Discard red areas and bloody material at the same time. Then chop the suet fairly fine and mix it with a little flour so it won't stick together in a mass. You can then store the fat in the refrigerator for months until you're ready to try a suet recipe, such as this one from "Maggie," a MOTHER reader in Naples, New York.

"This dessert suet pudding was originated by Adelaide Moore of Middlesex, England," says Maggie, "and it's yummy."

First mix together—in a large bowl—one cup of finely chopped suet, one cup molasses and one cup of milk. Set the mix aside while you sift together three cups of flour, one teaspoon of soda, one and one-half teaspoons of salt, one teaspoon of cinnamon, one-half teaspoon each of ginger, clove and nutmeg and one cup of raisins.

Blend the two batches of ingredients together and pour the mixture into a bread pan (some folks use coffee cans), and then steam the whole thing in water for three hours. Serve hot either with or without a topping of lemon sauce. It's delicious—and inexpensive!—both ways.

Blow Guilt Away

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Psychiatrists beware! A New Jersey artist's disposable guilt bag might take the place of a therapist's couch.

Instructions on the ordinary-looking brown paper bag say: "Place bag securely over your mouth. Take a deep breath and blow guilt out. Dispose of bag immediately."

About 2,500 kits of 10 bags each have been sold for $2.50 apiece since they went on the market just before Christmas, said Jack Goldenberg, who is marketing them.

The purchasers include model Margaux Hemingway, who bought a suitcase full, movie stars Candice Bergen, William Holden and Ingrid Bergman and comedian Rodney Dangerfield, say the owner of New York stores selling the guilt bags.

Saccharin Risk 'Less Than Extra Poundage'

WASHINGTON (AP) — If using saccharin keeps a person from gaining weight, the long-term cancer risk from the artificial sweetener is far less than the increased health risks caused by excess weight, a statistical analysis shows.

Dr. Bernard Cohen, a University of Pittsburgh physicist specializing in risk assessment, said Monday that preliminary data indicates the benefits of drinking a saccharin-sweetened diet soft drink exceed the risk if the drink prevents a person from taking in just one additional calorie.

Cohen cautioned that his statistical conclusions are based on the limited saccharin-bladder cancer risk data now available and that the results may change as ongoing studies provide more information.

"The conclusion also depends upon the extent to which saccharin helps prevent caloric intake," Cohen said in an interview.

"If you have a diet drink instead of a piece of pie, then there is a benefit. If you use a diet drink as an excuse to eat the pie, then you lose the benefit."

In a report in the current issue of Science magazine, Cohen concludes that drinking a diet soda daily during an entire lifetime cuts life expectancy by nine seconds per 12-ounce serving. This compares with a decreased life expectancy of 12 minutes for every cigarette smoked.

Cohen said health statistics indicate that a 45-year-old man approximately 10-per-cent overweight has a decreased life expectancy of 29 days for each excess pound. Associated with excess weight is increased risk of heart and blood vessel disease, stroke, high blood pressure and diseases such as diabetes.

Cohen calculated that drinking a diet beverage which usually contains less than one calorie is approximately equal to the risk of taking in one additional calorie by a person 10-per-cent overweight.

"A non-diet drink contains about 100 calories, so if all other things were unchanged, the substitution of diet for non-diet drinks would increase life expectancy by 100 times more than the cancer risk reduced it," Cohen said in the study.

SIX SAVED . . . TWICE

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Six survivors of a sunken clamboat were rescued twice off the Virginia coast Monday — once by a U.S. Coast Guard amphibious helicopter, and again by a passing fishing boat after the helicopter lost power and landed on the ocean. The coast guard said the body of the seventh crew member of the 127-foot Pari Passu, has been recovered.

The Bridge Expert

It is an accepted fact that defensive play is the most difficult segment of bridge to master. And so it is only natural that when I come across good defensive play, it is always a source of great satisfaction to me.

When today's deal was played in the 1977 Fall National Championships, it took a simple, but neat, defensive play by the West defender to prevent declarer from fulfilling his part-score contract.

Both sides vulnerable.
South deals.

◇ 10 9 4
♣ 8 4

SOUTH
♠ J 6
♡ 9 8 7
◇ A Q J 8 3 2
♣ K 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

After winning the opening spade lead with dummy's ace, declarer led the board's singleton trump and finessed his queen. West won the trick with the king and returned a low spade, East's king capturing the trick. East then played back a third spade, South ruffing.

The ace and queen of trumps were played next, picking up the adversely held pieces. Then came the king of clubs, West winning with his ace. West now took a time-out to reflect on the situation.

It became apparent to West that if he returned the queen of spades, South would ruff. South would now have it in his power to lead a club and finesse against West's jack. And if he did, the queen would then fell West's jack and enable South to ring home five club tricks.

So West, after winning the club ace, went after the heart suit. He banged down his king of hearts, dummy's ace taking the trick (if dummy's ace declined to take the trick, West would continue with another heart). Declarer was now "stuck" in dummy: he couldn't return to his own hand to lead a club and finesse against West's jack. So he had no choice but to play the club queen, hoping to catch the jack.

As can be observed, he didn't. When play had ended, declarer had lost two hearts, one spade, one diamond and one club, to incur a one-trick set.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, March 1
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on humor, experimentation, curiosity, movement, publishing and travel. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently — so does the number 3. You make gains by looking ahead, grasping overall view. You get answer to recent inquiry. It adds up to a green light.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You make progress by using obstacles as stepping stones. Stick with what you know — leave flash, ostentation to others. Steady pace now achieves goal. Money question will be resolved — partner or mate knows where to dig. You can strike pay dirt.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on how you express your wishes. Yes, public relations is now a major factor. Another Gemini, a Virgo and a Sagittarian figure prominently. Lie low — let others send signals. You can learn and profit, if contractual arrangement is checked by expert.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Go slow, obtain hint from Gemini message. Get together with co-workers or others who share basic concerns, interests. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio figure in your personal scenario. Stick to number 6. Yes, the flare-up at home was an incident, temporary, not to be blown up out of proportion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance, affair of heart, deciding what is solid as contrasted to ephemeral — these are highlighted. Changes occur, but they are subtle and you may not be immediately aware of them. Young person could make demands which lack common sense. Know it and don't be stampeded into immediate response.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept.22): Basic structures are important, more so than in recent past. Refuse to be cajoled by false flattery. Finish project. Nail down claims, promises. Older individual has ideas which seem immovable. Be lenient, not cowed or gullible. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently — and so does the number 8.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish what you start — study Virgo message. Look beyond the immediate, grasp long-range view. Aries — and another Libran — figure prominently. Short trip, call or message from relative command more-than-usual attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 2-Nov. 21): Make new start, accent innovation — be independent in thought, action. Leo, Aquarius figure in scenario. Spotlight on collection, protection of valuables, money and income potential. Breakthrough occurs — what was threadbare can be transformed to luxuriating warmth. Yes, the horn of plenty can be sounded!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Strive to imprint opinions, personality, style. Your ability to learn by teaching is enhanced. Cycle is high — you can decide the right way. Judgment, intuition are on target. Aquarius, Cancer and Leo figure prominently. Number 11 plays significant role. Wear bright colors, make personal appearances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid direct confrontation. Take ring roads. Surprise is being planned behind the scenes — you get chance to display talents, test theories. You'll get plenty of applause and reward, too. Sagittarius plays key role.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Affair of heart could be high on agenda. Emotions dominate — logic is likely to take a back seat. Restrictions are removed — you have greater opportunity for creative expression. Taurus, Scorpio persons are part of scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on standing in community, personal dignity, aspirations. Open dialogue with special person. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. One in authority could exert influence in your behalf. There is a price; be sure it isn't too steep.

Tax 'Holiday' Over For Wage-Earners

OTTAWA (CP) — Most of the country's wage and salary earners will find their pay packets lighter beginning this week as the impact of the government's temporary $100 tax cut announced last October wears off.

Personal income taxes will revert in March to the originally-planned formula for the year, meaning workers earning the average industrial wage of about $254 a week will find their take-home weekly pay about $12.50 less than it has been for the past two months.

The cuts in take-home pay will hit 7.5 million of the country's estimated 9.5 million employees in varying amounts.

The $100 tax reduction, announced by Finance Minister Jean Chretien in his Oct. 20 "mini-budget," was geared by the government to cut taxes — and increase consumer spending — during the high unemployment months of January and February.

By giving the spur to consumer spending, the government hoped to boost job creation. In January, the country had an all-time high of 991,000 unemployed.

Chretien said the $100 cut would cost the government more than $700 million. But the reduction helped run the government's estimated deficit for this financial year to a record $9.2 billion.

During January and February, take-home pay for millions of taxpayers rose by $50 a month because of the tax cut. About six million employees gained full benefit of the reduction and another 1,500,000 received lesser amounts.

But the changes in taxation which begin in March and extend throughout the year mean those temporary benefits will be eliminated.

When Chretien announced the January-February tax cut, he said it would help offset tougher anti-inflation guides for middle and low-income earners.

Most employees will be held to pay increases of six per cent this year because the government amended its own formula when inflation proved higher than expected last year. Under the old formula, workers would have been allowed raises of about eight per cent in 1978.

The $100 special tax cut was in addition to a reduction throughout the year equal to 7.2 per cent of personal taxes. That reduction in taxes was designed to take into account inflation during the 1977 tax year.

Tourism Tax Cuts Stressed

OTTAWA (CP) — Government efforts to reverse the growing tourism deficit are window-dressing and fanfare and should be replaced with tax reductions and better promotion, Dan McKenzie (PC-Winnipeg South Centre) said Monday.

He said in the Commons that Canadian visits to the United States are increasing while Americans are staying away from Canada, often blaming high prices and rude service.

Ottawa should reduce the sales tax on promotional literature, provide tax incentives for Canadians to holiday in their own country and work with the provinces for a more concerted promotional campaign.

Gong No Clanger, Dextrase Insists

TORONTO (CP) — A former chief of the Canadian defence staff says he will ignore a ruling by the Canadian Armed Forces on medal-wearing protocol.

Gen. Jacques Dextraze, chairman of CN Rail, said in an interview that he will continue to wear the Maltese cross of the Military and Hospitaller Order of St. Lazarus of Jerusalem whenever he is in uniform.

The latest ruling about the cross came from Col. Norman Buckingham, director of ceremonial for the Canadian Armed Forces and from Government House in Ottawa.

"It's not recognized and will not be worn with uniform," Col. Buckingham said in an interview.

Col. Buckingham said the medal is a pretty bauble and there would be as little justification for wearing a medal issued by a Rotary club.

Government House ruled the medal should not be worn with Canadian orders and decorations, British awards earned by Canadians, or with government-approved foreign decorations.

The Order of St. Lazarus, introduced in Canada in 1962, is a charitable organization that provides aid for leprosy and other skin disease victims, fosters Christian and Canadian unity, and gives aid to Christians in non-Christian lands.

U.S. Books Probed

OTTAWA (CP) — Secretary of State John Roberts said Monday he will investigate a charge that United States editions of Canadian books are being illegally imported despite a customs regulation that prohibits their entry.

Progressive Conservative MP David MacDonald (Egmont) said in the Commons government lawyers have told a Canadian author and publisher the customs regulation in question does not specifically include books.

MacDonald said copies of Book of Eve, by Constance Beresford-Howe and published by MacMillan of Canada, have been on sale in Montreal and Toronto despite being listed 18 months ago under a regulation prohibiting their entry into Canada.

Canadian authors and publishers were losing thousands of dollars because the cheaper U.S. editions were on sale here, he said.

Schumacher Hits At Both Parties

CALGARY (CP) — As soon as he resigned from the Progressive Conservative party to sit as an independent in the House of Commons, Stan Schumacher criticized both Conservative Leader Joe Clark and the Liberal Party.

"I think the country is demanding a change of government and I think the way Mr. Clark has been acting at the helm of the Conservative Party, this chance becomes less and less," Schumacher told a news conference.

"Certainly I don't think this country is looking for a sort of Tweedle-dum-Tweedle-dee arrangement which seems to be the way things are going.

"Mr. Clark has been quoted recently as saying there is little difference between the Trudeau Liberals and the Conservatives and furthermore, he doesn't think there should be much differnce.

"It would be bad for the country if there was. I think this is an astounding thing for th Leader of the Opposition to say after 10 years of Trudeau Liberal government."

Schumacher, 44, had earlier threatened to run as an independent if he did not win attempts to have the nomination in the new Bow River constituency declared void.

Schumacher, who has represented the Palliser constituency in the Commons since 1968, lost the Bow River nomination to Gordon Taylor, an independent member of the Alberta legislature.

Since then, he has repeatedly implicated Clark in irregularities he said occurred in Taylor's nomination, including more votes cast than there were paid-up members of the association.

Schumacher took his case to the Conservative caucus and to the national executive and lost his bid to have the nomination quashed.

Robert Coates, national party president, said Schumacher's request for a new nomination meeting was denied because an investigation had not substantiated the allegations.

The dispute began about two years ago when Schumacher announced he would seek the nomination in the Bow River riding because Palliser would be eliminated under redistribution.

Shortly after his election as leader in February, 1976, Clark said he also wanted to seek the Bow River nomination himself.

Clark's own Rocky Mountain riding would also disappear under redistribution.

Bow River contains the home towns of both Schumacher and Clark. Schumacher is a Drumheller, Alta., lawyer, while Clark was born in High River but had never represented that area.

Clark was later forced to back down in his plans and has since been nominated in the new Yellowhead constituency.

PWA Seeks Flights

EDMONTON (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines (PWA) has applied for permission to operate four bargain-priced domestic charter-flights this summer.

PWA is the first regional air carrier to apply for the advance-booking flights and if the air transport committee division of the Canadian Transport Commission approves their application the service will commence June 23.

PWA, inconjunction with Suntours Ltd., expects 7,600 people to use the service, which will operate between:

—Edmonton and Toronto: $169 return, every Saturday between June 24 and Sept. 30, with either one or two-week stopovers.

—Calgary to Toronto: $169 return, with the same dates as the Edmonton to Toronto run.

—Edmonton to Vancouver: $79 return, every Friday, between June 23 and Sept. 29, with either one or two-week stopovers.

—Calgary to Vancouver: $79 return, every Friday starting June 23.

Boeing 737 jets will be used for the non-stop flights. The fares are the equivalent of the current regularly-scheduled one-way fare plus $31.

Richard Bevir, Suntour regional manager, said Monday his company and Quebecair Ltd. of Montreal will also apply to the air transport committee for licences to operate Vancouver to Toronto and Montreal to Vancouver domestic charter flights.

The Vancouver to Toronto run will cost $199 return and is expected to run every Friday between June 30 and Sept. 29. The Vancouver to Montreal flight will cost $219 and is scheduled for every Friday between June 24 and Sept. 30.

The applications follow a request by Transport Minister Otto Lang to the air transport committee to loosen domestic charter flight service.

Last year the commission approved 50 domestic charter flights by Air Canada and CP Air for 1978, a decision which provoked concern from regional carriers.

Tags of All Kinds On Allowance Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Adrien Lambert, a Social Credit MP and head of a large family, was painted as everything from a chauvinist to a progressive thinker Monday for proposed special allowance for homemakers.

Lambert told the Commons many working mothers would stay home to look after their families if they could get a special allowance from the federal government to supplement the family income.

Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Party House leader, said the proposal would help women have an equal opportunity to be homemakers or workers.

But David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) said the proposal could reinforce the notion, slowly being dropped by society, that the primary role of a woman is mother and housewife.

Simma Holt (L—Vancouver Kingsway) said Lambert is helping maintain pressures for women to stay at home. If housewifes were to get an allowance, it should be from her husband not Ottawa.

CBC Boosting Jobs by 700

OTTAWA (CP) — Although the CBC will slow its rate of television station expansion in the coming fiscal year, it expects to add another 700 people to its staff, bringing the total to 12,222 by the end of March next year.

Spending estimates tabled in the Commons last week called for an increase of $55.4 million in Parliament's subsidy to the state-owned broadcasting system, bringing the total to $522.4 million for 1978-79.

But within this total, there is to be a reduction to $60 million from the current fiscal year's $64.1 million in capital expenditures on extension of the CBC's radio and television services, and in additions and replacements to plant and facilities.

With rising costs of nearly all kinds of broadcasting equipment and office and studio construction, this reduction is viewed as a major pinch.

The CBC will continue to extend its radio services under its policy of bringing the national service to all significant pockets of population. But this will be at the cost of slowing expansion of the television service and a significant cut in replacements to TV equipment.

The spending estimates show continued growth in CBC staff. From 10,873 on staff at the end of September, 1976, the figure rose to 11,613 at the end of last September.

As of the end of the current fiscal year March 31, the CBC has a planned continuing establishment of 11,526 employees. This will rise to 12,222 by the end of the new fiscal year, March 31, 1979.

A footnote to the spending estimates says the increase is due to greater Canadian content in the CBC's programs, the telecasting of parliamentary debates, and the forthcoming Commonwealth Games in Edmonton. Part of the increase is also needed for maintenance on the new capital projects the CBC has already undertaken.

The CBC will provide broadcasting facilities for foreign networks since Canada is host to the Commonwealth games. The spending estimates earmark $5.3 million for operating and capital expenditures on the Games.

In the current fiscal year, $2.7 million was earmarked for preparatory work on broadcasting the Games.

The CBC had $11.8 million in parliamentary grants to provide similar host-country broadcasting services for the 1976 summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

Abolish CBC: Report

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Economic Council study has called for sweeping changes in government regulatory systems, including the restructuring or abolishment of the CBC.

If abolished, the federal funds saved could be reallocated to subsidize the distribution of private Canadian radio-television broadcasts in remote areas and to encourage Canadian creative talent.

If revamped, it should be done in a way that would stress shorter daily broadcasting and emphasize quality instead of quantity. Also, it would not be permitted to accept advertising revenue.

"With agreement of the provinces, a requirement would be made that one channel offered by each cable TV company be devoted to CBC programming, among other things."

Another proposal was that the federal government withdraw from regulation of cable television and from telecommunications except in matters of inter-provincial concern.

Greenpeace Bounces Off

HALIFAX (CP) — Two sealing vessels steamed out of Halifax harbor Monday for the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the The Front, off Labrador.

In their wake bounced three motorized dinghies containing members of the Greenpeace Foundation which attempted unsuccessfully to prevent the vessels from sailing.

Sealers pelted the Greenpeacers with projectiles and sprayed them with water as the larger vessel slipped her moorings and ploughed out of the harbor, the dinghies criss-crossing her path.

In Ottawa, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc told a Newfoundland member of the Commons that opponents of the hunt this year may acquire new mandatory permits needed by anyone wishing to witness the harvest. But permit holders would not be able to interfere with the hunt or the hunters.

He said he hopes thre will not be a confrontation similar to the occasionally angry ones of a year ago on the ice.

A few hours after the sealing vessels Martin Karlson and Arctic Endeavor cleared Halifax harbor, a news report on CBC-TV's Halifax-produced program Here Today said legislation was expected to be introduced in the Commons today to halt or control anti-hunt activities of groups such as Greenpeace.

It said the legislation would be introduced by LeBlanc.

Teaching Sex With Cartoons

TORONTO (CP) — Many Ontario high schools will soon be using a series of sex-education booklets that include crossword puzzles and cartoon illustrations on birth control.

Professor Peter Robertson of the University of Toronto, one of the authors of the three booklets, said the series looks at relationships of people and their values involving sexuality.

Designed for students between 16 and 18 years old, the booklets contain written exercises, including quizzes on contraception.

A booklet on birth control says that teen-agers should not be embarrassed to practise contraception if they are going to be sexually active.

The professor said he feels there is a lack of emphasis on values and feelings in sex-education classes.

Some teachers are not dealing with the emotional and psychological aspects of sexuality, he said.

He said the federal health department has ordered 15,000 copies for national distribution.

Businessmen Ask Reduced Taxes

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian businessmen are not satisfied with current policies to stimulate the economy according to a Bank of Montreal poll of 2,261 businessmen which indicates most of them would like lower government spending and reduced taxes.

Asked what action the government should take, 42 per cent of the buinessmen across Canada who responded felt the government should decrease spending, 39 per cent said it should reduce taxes, and 10 per cent called for reduced growth of money supply.

Only five per cent said that current government policy was about right.

On the state of the economy, 36 per cent felt it was fair but improving, 32 per cent said it was fair but worsening. Another 24 per cent said it was bad.

The bank said in a statement Monday that its 1978 poll of businessmen showed little change from the mood of mild pessimism revealed in a survey it took last year.

Businessmen in Alberta and British Columbia were generally more optimistic than those in the eastern part of the country.

About 40 per cent of those polled this year agreed that devaluation of the Canadian dollar has improved their competitive position.

Before The Judge

A 23-year-old man pleaded guilty Monday in Victoria provincial court to one charge of robbery with violence and two counts of attempted robbery with violence.

Marek Bohdan Czyzewski, 1023 Belmont, entered the pleas through defence lawyer David Wilson and was remanded by Judge Fred Green to March 22 for a presentence report and sentencing.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang related the sequence of events Feb. 11 which led to Czyzewski's arrest by Victoria city police.

The string of holdups started at about 4:40 p.m., Lang said, when Czyzewski entered The Jewelery Box, 910 Government, grabbed a woman by the throat and demanded money. He was unsuccessful, rushing out when a customer came into the store, Lang said.

At about 4:49, Lang continued, Czyzewski went to Studio 35, at 634 Humboldt, and grabbed a woman from behind, saying, "I want you to give me all the money you have." The woman struggled free and Czyzewski was again unsuccessful in his attempt.

His successful attempt was made at about 6:30 p.m. when he entered Freddy the Freeloader's, 1537 Fort. There, he grabbed the male clerk by the throat, reached in and took about $150 from the till. A struggle ensued, Lang said, and Czyzewski dropped $24 and ran from the store when a customer ran out to phone police.

Lang said Czyzewski was arrested at about 7 p.m. by police when he arrived home. Czyzewski made statements to police that he attempted the robberies because he had no job or money. Lang informed Green that Czyzewski was on mandatory parole at the time of the offences and had two previous convictions for robbery.

Two men were remanded in custody after being charged with weekend break-ins.

Adam Alfred Milne, 24, of 1002 Vancouver, was charged with Saturday break-ins at the offices of Dr. R.F. Sanglap, 222-645 Fort, and McGill and Orme Drugs, 649 Fort. Milne is also charged with possession of a stolen revolver, ammunition, drugs and syringes as well as possession of a restricted weapon.

He was remanded until Thursday for election of trial method and possible bail hearing

David William Holst, 19, of 1115 Caledonia, was charged with breaking and entering in connection with a Saturday break-in at Mais Furniture, 1821 Cook. Holst was also charged with possession of stolen furniture and home appliances and was remanded until Wednesday for a bail hearing.

David Wayne Tudor, 28, of 2136 Ridge, was fined $375 for possession of a stolen television set.

After a trial Feb. 6, Tudor was found guilty by Green of having a color television set which was stolen from Oxford Castle Inn, 133 Gorge Road East, on Sept. 15. Green ordered a pre-sentence report before Monday's sentencing.

Green said he had three observations: that Tudor had potential and intelligence, that he also had a criminal record, and that he had not been able to achieve any stability in his work life.

Tudor argued that he did have a good working relationship with his superiors but that they discriminated against him because of the charge.

The Problem with Willows

After eliminating all the synonyms and the non-official trade names there are eighty-six species and hybrids of the Willow native to, or commonly grown on the North American continent.

Some will thrive only in constantly moist soil such as the banks of streams or in swampy land where they are often planted to relieve the wet conditions.

The species best known to home gardeners is the Weeping Willow, Salix babylonica, with the synonym S. pendula.

The gracefully drooping branches are beloved by gardeners for their dappled shade in summer, while their silhouette against the winter sky is equally appealing.

Normally a thirty-foot tree, the Weeping Willow grows rapidly because of its strong root system which forages far and wide for food and moisture.

This extensive root system can be an expensive problem in the small gardens of a built-up community. In their search for moisture the roots have been known to travel fifty feet to reach a drain tile.

Some gardeners have been compelled to dig up twenty feet of drain tile a year which has been completely blocked by the roots. So tight is this mass it is necessary to use a saw to cut through at the tile joints, then to leave the tiles for a week to dry before the mass of roots can be driven out with a block of wood.

After having a drain plugged with willow roots the gardener decides the tree should be cut down, but this is not always a solution to the problem.

If the stump is left it will put up hundreds of shoots, and if the stump is removed sucker growths will appear from the underground roots which have gravitated to heavily watered lawns and areas where underground water collects.

These sucker growths also make a sudden appearance in neighboring gardens, much to the surprise and annoyance of the owners.

When talking to gardeners who have experienced this problem many have asked about a solution that can be applied to the stump to kill both the stumps and the roots.

The solution they are referring to is used to make the stumps and the roots flammable so they can be rendered harmless by burning. It is used when clearing land but is dangerous to use in a built-up community.

When enough of the powder and water has been applied to saturate the entire root system, the stump can explode into flames if a spark falls on it from a nearby bonfire, or just from the residual heat in a burned out match.

As with tinder dry conditions in the woods, the heat from a human footprint or the warmth from a small animal's body is sufficient to start a conflagration.

In small home gardens willow roots could extend under sheds or garages where flammable materials are stored either on the same, or on adjoining property, and the owner of the treated stump is liable for damages.

Much as we appreciate the graceful beauty of the Weeping Willow it is important that home gardeners should know before planting the problems that can, and will, develop in a built-up area where garden lots are limited to 50 or 60 feet in width and 120 feet in length.

BUGG — In memory of a loving son Robert Jr., who passed away Feb. 28, 1975.
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
To sit and talk to him awhile.
To be together in the same old way
Would be our dearest wish today.
Dear Lord, forgive a silent tear
A constant wish that he were here,
Others are taken, yes we know,
But he was ours, and we loved him so.
—Always remembered by Mom, Dad, Helen and Roger.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc. for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Epilepsy Drug OK'd by FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced today it has granted approval of the anti-seizure drug valproic acid for the treatment of petit mal epilepsy.

The drug will be sold in the United States by Abbott Laboratories under the brand name Depakene. It is chemically similar to sodium valproate, which is widely used in other countries and which the Epilepsy Foundation of America has been campaigning for in recent months.

The FDA, which gave the drug unusually quick consideration, said it had found valproic acid "likely to be useful in the treatment of a significant number of epileptic patients who do not respond well to currently available drugs."

Valproic acid is expected to be used most often in the treatment of petit mal or absence seizures, which are characterized by staring episodes, inattentiveness or momentary loss of consciousness.

Teachers' Fed Asks Cabinet for Cash

The B.C. Teachers' Federation today called on the provincial government for more financial and moral support for the public education system.

Four BCTF executive members including president Pat Brady told the provincial cabinet at its meeting in Esquimalt the school system needs positive public support from government for the many excellent educational services now offered, and a commitment to continue to improve the school system.

The federation also called for the 1978 provincial grants to schools for operating and capital expenses to be set at a level sufficient to enable the system to continue to grow.

Other members of the executive included first and second vice-presidents Peter Minshull and Allen Garneau and past president Bill Broadley.

The government could show its support by recognizing the current decline in school enrolment cannot be accompanied by a decrease in grants, but should be seen as an opportunity to make badly needed improvements in school services.

It also says decentralizing handicaped students by moving them into regular schools is a "costly venture."

The BCTF wants a reversal of the current trend of shifting a greater share of school costs onto local taxpayers.

"If it is your opinion that the public school system is both below standard and too expensive, as some of your public announcements and fiscal policy seem to indicate, we believe that the minister of education should convene a meeting of representatives of the parties concerned."

Such a meeting could bring about needed improvements, they suggested.

The federation spokesmen said the ministry has released a summary of increases in school board budgets which takes no account of the effects of inflation or the additional costs of providing special education for handicapped children, of integration of native Indian children and of the development of French language programs.

They said government reports have given the impression the school system is largely responsible for the problem of youth unemployment.

Many of the 30,000 BCTF members construe this as an attempt to turn the taxpayers against the public school system.

"The federation is puzzled and alarmed by the apparent discrepancy between the government's known or assumed aspirations for the public school system of the province and some government statements and actions concerning education."

HELP INVITED TO COMBAT FOOD COSTS

Everybody talks about high costs and other food problems but no one has been able to do anything about it — until the People's Food Commission came along.

This non-government inquiry comes to Victoria in the fall as part of a series of 65 public hearings — 12 in B. C. communities — designed to stimulate discussion about food and to draw up a national food policy for Canada.

Among those active in trying to urge citizens and groups to prepare submissions is Derrick Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment, which will be one group delivering a brief at the two or three-day hearing.

"There have been so many government inquiries, commissions and conferences without change; let us take it down to the grass roots and see if that makes any difference," Mallard said.

A group planning to make representation to the food commission has started work in Victoria, which it is hoped will lead to a local food council. Interested members of the public are invited to discuss food commission objectives at a meeting March 8 at 7:45 p.m. in Grace Lutheran Church, 1273 Fort.

Meanwhile, CASE will help anyone assemble and prepare information for presentation to the hearings, using whatever means they select: briefs, films, slides, visual displays, tape recorded material, or literary work.

Farmers, organic growers, the housewife, student, or husbands who only occasionally buy or prepare food are invited to take part.

Hearings will be only a first-round, Mallard said. They could lead to more specific undertakings like research in the following year.

He said local groups could research such things as which stores sell food raised and processed at home, and which deal in imported food; how much food is being raised in B. C. for export and how much local food is imported from the mainland; how much of the total cost is attributable to energy cost?

The commission's co-ordinator is Jean Christie, who said hearings will be patterned after the Mackenzie Valley pipeline inquiry conducted by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, which got down to earth public opinion.

The commission, backed by the National Farmer's Union, Canadian Labor Congress and United Church, needs $300,000 to bankroll the hearings, to start in September.

Persons wishing to participate in a local food council are invited to bring themselves up to date on background by calling local food commission representatives Nancy Stuart or Doris Bergbrusch at 595-2260, evenings, or 382-3032. Mallard may be reached at 652-3487 or 652-3132.

EIGHT-ROOM doll's house, completely furnished and nearly five-foot square, was built by Mrs. Donna Grieve of 4094 Atlas Place for her two daughters, Teresa and Genevieve. The project took six weeks and was done while her husband, PO Dwight Grieve, was at sea on a cruise. Mrs. Grieve is now looking for some place to exhibit the miniature home.

Undersea Gusher Cleanup 'Neglect'

LONDON (AP) — Technology to clean up oil spills has been neglected in the world's drive to extract oil from beneath the sea, says Jane's Ocean Technology, an authoritative reference book published today.

"Progress in technology associated with oil spill containment and collection in rough sea and ocean conditions has been almost non-existent in relation to the huge financial benefits which countries such as Britain and Norway will be deriving from North Sea oil," the book says in the forward to its 1978 edition.

Editor Robert Trillo wrote in the foreword of the 820-page book that exploitation of oil beneath the stormy North Sea has been "a truly impressive technological achievement" that will allow Britain to become self-sufficient in oil by 1980.

But he cites the blowout on the oil rig Ekofisk Bravo in Norway's sector of the North Sea last April 22 as an example of the neglect of cleanup technologies. The gusher finally was capped April 30 by a team of Texans led by specialist Red Adair.

Trillo wrote that scientists disagree on the degree of damage oil spills cause to the world's oceans but says: "There is little disagreement that damage does occur.

"It is inconceivable that the various technologies required to devise an effective rough water oil containment and collection system do not exist."

The use of detergents to disperse oil spills, he says, has a disadvantage of adding "further pollutants to the sea with their questionable effects."

Trillo reported many companies around the world "are developing small mechanical devices for dealing with oil spills" but "the amount of money going into this rapidly increasing business is not sufficient to develop the large ocean systems which are required."

Jane's Ocean Technology is in its third year of publication.

Construction Starts Up In January

TORONTO (CP) — The value of construction starts in January of this year was $1,081,211,000, a 19 per cent increase from $904,829,000 in January, 1977, CanaData reported today.

CanaData, a marketing service of Southam Business Publications Ltd., said increases in the value of construction starts were reported in Quebec, Ontario and the Atlantic region. The Prairies showed no growth while British Columbia had a slight decrease.

Quebec's gain was 51 per cent, chiefly from the James Bay energy development project.

Synagogue Restorer Dies at 52

Funeral services will be held at 1.30 p.m. Wednesday at Congregation Temple Emanuel, 1461 Blanshard, for one of the synagogue's most distinguished members.

Allan Kramer, 52, who died in Vancouver General Hospital Sunday night, was co-chairman of the committee in charge of restoring the synagogue, which is the oldest in Canada.

He will be buried at the Jewish cemetery on Fernwood. For many years he headed the committee which oversaw the cemetery's upkeep.

Kramer was president of the Industrial Iron and Metal Trading Co.

He is survived by his wife Trixie, of 1239 Union Road, daughters, Karen and Leanne, and his mother, Mrs. Etta Kramer of 2333 Beach Drive.

Surgery Means Death for Twin

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio — A surgeon would have to decide which siamese twin boy would live and which would die if an operation were performed to separate them, their doctor says.

Dr. Wilfred Dodgson, chief of pediatrics at Tod Babies' and Children's Hospital, said Monday that the twins, Christopher George and Timothy Elias Rodriguez, cannot be separated successfully so both can live because they apparently share a common, three-chambered heart.

"It is possible that there are two hearts joined together," Dr. Dodgson said. But judging from x-rays and other tests performed at Pittsburgh Children's Hospital after the twins' birth Feb. 17, he and other doctors believe this is unlikely.

The twins also share a liver, but Dr. Dodgson said the liver conceivably could be divided.

The father, Elias Rodriguez, a steelworker from Youngstown, said he could not believe it when doctors told him the babies were born joined together at chest and abdomen facing each other.

"I had to see to believe," he said. "It was like a nightmare. I never thought it would happen to me."

Dr. Dodgson has advised Rodriguez and his wife, Georgeann, both 22, to wait and see what happens.

"Since the babies are doing well, possibly we could re-evaluate in three or four months," the doctor said. "Maybe the examination (in Pittsburgh) wasn't accurate."

The boys are to stay in the hospital for about three more weeks. Then, their parents are considering putting them in a special children's nursing home where they can get the best of care.

"When I take care of them and I see how hard it is — hard to support their heads — I'm scared to turn them," said Mrs. Rodriguez. "I'm afraid to hurt them."

When the parents visit the hospital, it takes both of them to handle and feed the boys, who weigh 12 pounds eight ounces.

"They can't live the way they are," said Mrs. Rodriguez, who is still recovering from the caesarian section required to deliver the babies. "How can they live like that?"

He'd Swap Chicks For Chickens. . .

people

DETROIT — Marty Handleman says he would swap his strip joint for a chicken processing plant any time.

The 36-year-old owner of the Riverfront Follies in Windsor, Ont., across the river from Detroit, used to look forward to going to work.

For the last eight years, he has been surrounded by naked women, but he says that doesn't compensate for all the problems.

"I'd trade the follies for one good chicken processing plant," Handleman says of the headaches dealing with exotic dancers, full houses and police.

Before nudity was legalized in Ontario, the place was raided often — like every Thursday night for three weeks in a row.

"Several years ago I wouldn't hire a girl if she wouldn't go nude," Handleman said of his attempt to make the place a classy burlesque house. "Now I won't hire them if they don't have talent."

He joined other Windsor merchants in displaying his wares out on the sidewalk a few years ago during sidewalk sale days, sending a stripper in a net dress to dance to blaring music in front of his place and causing traffic jams.

"People were hanging off the roof tops," Handleman said. "There must have been 3,000 people."

"I definitely had a bad reputation," he said, recalling a blur of womem from the old days. He added that some of the better exotic dancers wouldn't work for him because of his reputation with women.

Things changed about three years ago when a close woman friend died. A year later, he married Lillian, a tri-lingual translator.

His wife says she isn't jealous of Handleman's dancers, but she avoids involvement with them.

"Let's face it. It's tempting and it's there . . . but after all, he had a choice," she said.

Handleman — who said he treats his employees like a father or a big brother would — says he hasn't touched any of them in two years.

COMEDIAN KIRBY GIVEN 10 YEARS

LAS VEGAS — Impressionist George Kirby has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for his conviction on heroin-trafficking charges.

U.S. District Judge Roger Foley ordered Kirby, 52, taken into custody Monday and placed in the Clark County jail. He revoked Kirby's $10,000 bail and raised bail to $100,000 pending appeal.

The comedian received two concurrent 10-year prison terms for his conviction on charges of distribution of a controlled substance, possession with intent to distribute, and aiding and abetting.

The maximum penalty for each of the felony drug charges is 15 years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

INSTRUCTOR'S TIP NOT WELL-TIMED

LONDON — Mrs. Gladys Gibbons says if her driving instructor had hit the brake or switched off the ignition — instead of merely bracing himself and yelling "Now you've bloody done it!" — she might not have hit the tree.

But he didn't and she did, she said, so she filed suit against him Monday for negligence.

Mrs. Gibbons, 55, told the High Court: "He could have done something. He could have put his leg over and stamped on the brake, or turned off the ignition."

But instead, she said, 59-year-old Howard Priestley braced himself and shouted: "Now you've bloody done it!"

Both received minor injuries in the crash, which occurred when Mrs. Gibbons swerved to avoid an oncoming car during her 19th lesson with Priestley. He denied negligence and the hearing continues.

The car belonged to Gibbons.

Best of Both Possible Worlds

PITTSBURGH — The audience wasn't sure which it liked better — poetry or Princess Grace of Monaco, who returned to the U.S. stage for the first time in 26 years with a poetry reading.

"I didn't know I liked poetry so well," said Frank Schneider, chairman of a company that builds power plants.

"She epitomizes everything a woman should be," said Debbie Tranter, who said she came not to hear poetry but to see a princess. "She's really elegant. She's someone I idolize."

"It's such a nostalgic occasion," said Dr. Barbara Cass, a Gulf Oil executive.

"There's nothing like poetry being read by a princess," said lawyer Fred Egler, a season ticket holder in the International Poetry Forum, which sponsored the royal appearance.

Tiny Tim Returns

LOS ANGELES — Tiny Tim says he will make a comeback soon—"It's just a matter of when and how" — but there won't be a second time around in the marriage game.

"I'm married until death do us part. I cannot get married again," says the stringy-haired, falsetto-voiced, ukelele-strumming entertainer of Tiptoe-through-the-Tulips fame.

Tim, who married the then-17-year-old Victoria Buddinger in 1969, was divorced several months ago, but he still maintains marriage is a sacred institution.

Candu Pay-Offs Suspect - Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee suggested Monday that Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) payments in connection with two foreign Candu nuclear reactor sales were used for illegal or corrupt purposes.

The public accounts committee said it is left with that suspicion after conducting hearings into AECL sales of reactors in Argentina and South Korea.

It also stated that J. Lorne Gray, president of AECL when much of the negotiations were undertaken over agents and sales to the two countries, was a reluctant and unco-operative and evasive witness who had committed the people of Canada to immense expenditures for agents' fees without knowing what services would be rendered.

The sales involved payments of $2.5 million to an unidentified agent in the case of the Argentine sale and more than $15 million in fees and expenses to Shaul Eisenberg in connection with the Korean sale.

The report of the committee, which conducted 17 hearings last year said:

"The successful concealment, by complex and sophisticated payment and banking procedures in foreign countries, of the identities of the ultimate recipients of the funds and the nature of services rendered, leads your committee to suspect that some of the payments were indeed used for illegal or corrupt purposes."

The committee, made up of members of all parties and headed by a Conservative, also had this to say in a call for greater accountability to ministers by the Crown corporation:

—There is a question whether the AECL should be in the business of selling reactors and at any rate there must be a change in business practices;

—The government in the future must approve all contracts that expose the country to significant financial risks;

—There must be a code of ethics to include guidance on such things as paying agents;

FOOD UP 1.4%

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher prices for fresh fruit, pork and dairy products pushed the price of food up by 1.4 per cent in the four weeks ending Feb. 17. The anti-inflation board's monthly survey also shows that food prices are up 10.9 per cent above levels of a year ago.

STICKLERS FOR STICKERS at the motor-vehicle testing station on McKenzie have sparked a rush that hasn't been experienced for months. 37,000 FACE BUS SHUTDOWN

Trip to Work . . . . . A Great Trek

The shut down of B.C. Hydro bus service in Greater Victoria Wednesday for a one-day union "study session" means more than 37,000 regular bus users will be forced to find alternative transportation.

They'll have to drive a car, join a car pool or hitch-hike.

And while major employers anticipate the one-day strike will cause only a minor inconvenience for employees, the same does not apply to the elderly.

Buses in Vancouver and the Lower Mainland were not operating today as members of the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU) held their "study sessions."

Hydro's business offices are also affected as the ATU threw up picket lines which are being honored by members of the Office and Technical Employees Union (OTEU).

The trip to work became a great trek for many persons as they walked or hitch-hiked.

Others who don't normally drive to work brought in their cars, jamming the George Massey tunnel and bridges into the city area.

Lions Gate bridge was bumper-to-bumper, with cars backing up to Upper Levels and almost one kilometre along Marine Drive in North Vancouver.

Taxis were almost impossible to find.

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday he has no intention of intervening in the dispute.

He said he will leave the matter in the hands of the union and Hydro's management and expects an early settlement.

The 3,500 ATU members voted for a strike Nov. 17 and 18.

Hydro said in an application for an injunction that under provincial labor legislation, the union had three months from those dates in which strike action could be taken and the deadline had passed.

Ashton said, however, that the union kept the strike vote alive by instituting an overtime ban Feb. 17, the last day of the three-month period, at the Surrey transit centre where 170 of the system's 2,000 bus drivers work.

Hydro argued that an overtime ban by 170 Surrey bus drivers did not constitute a strike.

The board ruled Monday night, however, that the walkout is legal under the definition of the provincial labor code.

In Vancouver, a police spokesman said morning rush-hour traffic in the downtown area was heavier than usual but there were no major tie-ups.

In Victoria, some senior citizen groups are trying to arrange car pools but a shortage of volunteer drivers is making the task dificult, a spokesman for Silver Threads said.

GOURMET COOKING NOT TO THEIR TASTE

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — Prisoners at Scheveningen Jail rebelled when a new chef tried to give them French haute cuisine and they won.

Convicts at the Dutch prison, on the outskirts of The Hague, complained they were being fed French-style potatoes, venison and elaborate sauces.

They said they wanted meatballs, rissole and stew.

The prison governor accepted the majority verdict and ordered a return to the old weekly menu.

"It's all a question of taste," the governor said. "Farmer's stew obviously goes down better. With the majority of our customers, if it's something they don't know, they won't eat it."

Hart Served RCMP, Blais Confirms

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais confirmed Monday that American Warren Hart worked for the RCMP security service.

But he denied that the RCMP ever ordered Hart to conduct electronic surveillance on then solicitor-general Warren Allmand and NDP MP John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt).

He said the MPs were bugged by accident and the tape of Allmand was destroyed.

Replying to questions in the Commons by Elmer MacKay (PC Central Nova), Blais admitted the RCMP security service had paid Hart for the work he did for them.

Last week MacKay tabled a sworn affidavit from Hart and other documents alleging the RCMP ordered Hart—an FBI informer who had worked undercover in the United States—to bug Allmand.

Hart said the RCMP thought Allmand was a Communist.

Blais told reporters Hart was what has been referred to as a source . . . charged with certain operations in order to provide certain information to the RCMP.

The bugging of Allmand, now consumer affairs minister, and Rodriguez was done accidentally while Hart was taping a conversation with another target. When the security service officers who were working with Hart discovered that Allmand had been taped without his knowledge, they destroyed the tape.

Blais said the officers felt this was all the corrective action necessary and one of his major concerns is why the RCMP did not tell Allmand or Prime Minister Trudeau that Allmand had been accidentally taped.

Meanwhile, MacKay said Monday that American Warren Hart says he smuggled immigrants into Canada as a cover for payments from the RCMP.

MacKay said in an interview that Hart says the RCMP asked him to get in touch with organized crime in Toronto, and "so far his story is checking out remarkably well."

He said the idea was for Hart to be able to point to immigrant smuggling as the source of the income that provided him with luxury.

In Toronto, The Sun said Warren Hart, self-proclaimed RCMP informer, almost blew his cover in 1973 as a mob-connected person when he tried to take an underworld figure through customs for members of an organized crime group in Toronto.

NEWS BRIEFS

Help Cost $100m

OTTAWA — Treasury Board president Robert Andras produced figures Monday indicating temporary hiring and consulting and contract services cost the government about $100 million last year.

Gas Hike Sought

OTTAWA — Half a dozen oil companies have asked the Anti-Inflation Board for permission to boost gasoline and other petroleum product prices by an average 0.5 cents a gallon, effective March 12. The increase would be in addition to the 2.3-cent-a-gallon increase scheduled for March 2.

$20m Expansion

CASTLEGAR (CP) — Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Monday a major lumber producer in British Columbia will announce a $20 million expansion program in the next few days.

CBC Adding 700

OTTAWA (CP) — Although the CBC will slow its rate of television station expansion in the coming fiscal year, it expects to add another 700 people to its staff, bringing the total to 12,222 by the end of March next year. See story Page 27.

Macdonald Resigns, 7 Seats Now Empty

OTTAWA (CP) — Former finance minister Donald Macdonald, a veteran of five cabinet posts, is resigning his seat in the House of Commons effective tomorrow, his office confirmed today.

His departure will leave seven seats vacant in the Commons and Prime Minister Trudeau must by law announce dates by Wednesday for by-elections in at least two of those seats.

But there is speculation that even if Trudeau announces dates for by-elections they will not be held. Many observers expect a general election to be held sometime this year, likely in the spring or early summer.

Macdonald, MP for Toronto's Rosedale riding, has already entered private law practice since leaving the onerous finance post last September.

The 45-year-old MP, who also served as minister of energy, mines and resources as well as defence and government house leader, was first elected to the Commons in 1962.

2 In Hoods Rob Store Of $200

Two hooded men with guns ordered a storekeeper to lie on the floor and fled with about $200 in View Royal Monday night.

Colwood RCMP said today they have no suspects in the armed holdup of View Royal Food Market, 246½ Island Highway.

Tony Lee, 27, said he was looking after the market for his uncle and was alone when the two men came in. "One of them said, 'Get up and get me the money quick'."

There was a revolver in one man's hand and the other pointed what appeared to be a rifle.

"One of them said, 'Keep it cool, man.' I told them that's what I was going to do — keep it cool," Lee said.

He said they wore rain jackets with hoods but no masks.

Borrowing Scheme Strengthens Dollar

Times News Services

The Canadian dollar firmed slightly against the U.S. dollar today with the news Canada will likely do a sizeable portion of its foreign borrowing in the U.S.

In trading on the Montreal market at noon, the U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was down 1-25 at $1.1150. Pound sterling was down 1-5 at $2.1619.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 3-100 at $0.8968. Pound sterling was down 1-10 at $1.9390.

The firming came after Finance Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons Monday the government is borrowing $200 million U.S. from a special $1½ billion standby credit it set up with chartered banks last fall to protect the dollar's value.

Political opponents blasted him for issuing vague statements that may lead to continuing speculation against the dollar's value.

"Why can't he (Chretien) clear the air on what foreign borrowings are planned?" asked Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic. "Will they be massive such as $2 billion or $4 billion or nominal?"

Elsewhere in the world, the U.S. dollar moved sharply upward against major world currencies in foreign exchange trading abroad Monday and then lost some of the gains as it drifted downward in late New York trading, in apparent response to government statements by Switzerland and Iran.

The Swiss government announced a new series of moves, which one official described as the toughest since the Second World War, to halt the flow of foreign capital.

Gov't Easing In Estuary Row

The government moved Monday to pacify citizens' groups which have charged the environment ministry with trying to ram through land development policy for the Cowichan River estuary, but at the same time caught criticism on another flank.

Responding to complaints that this week's public hearing in Duncan is inadequate the government announced Monday that a second hearing has been scheduled for March 13.

The announcement won the government little respite, however, with the Sierra Club attacking the environment ministry for not allowing public input into all phases of impact assessment.

Sierra Club spokesman Bob Nixon said the environmental assessment procedures adopted by Environment Minister Jim Nielsen are inadequate because they do not involve the public.

Nixon also criticized the government for processing development applications from five companies before developing an over-all environmental management policy for the estuary.

Nixon said consideration of the applications should be halted until after a final estuary policy has been established and approved by cabinet.

The five companies that have submitted development applications are Western Energy, Doman Industries Ltd., Island Shake and Shingle, Hidden Valley Sawmills Ltd. and B.C. Forest Products.

A government spokesman said the environment ministry has not implied approval for the applications by processing them.

Sherrell Ban Politics-McGeer

SHERRELL . . .shocked

The federal government's decision to refuse to give an immigration credit to Robbie Sherrell for his appointment as president of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. was political, Education Minister Pat McGeer said today.

McGeer, the minister responsible for ICBC, said local immigration officials raised no particular problems when the appointment of Sherrell, an American, was first announced.

"So it's something being done by Immigration Minister Bud Cullen or by the federal cabinet for their own reasons and it was a political judgment on their part," McGeer said.

Asked what ICBC will do now, McGeer said he couldn't say.

"Maybe we should ask Mr. Cullen who should be president of ICBC. He's the one that seems to be making that decision."

McGeer refused to speculate when asked if he thought Sherrell would ever get the $80,000-a-year job.

The minister defended the actions of Price Waterhouse, the management consulting firm hired to find a new president, but refused to say if its short list of potential candidates included any Canadians.

McGeer said he does not know enough about federal immigration rules to say whether the decision on Sherrell will be appealed.

He said he has not talked to Sherrell since the federal decision was revealed.

In a letter, Cullen said he concluded that ICBC "did not conduct an adequate search of the Canadian labor market, including failure to consult with or seek the assistance of the employment and immigration commission."

Immigration spokesmen say if Sherrell has sufficient credits in other categories he may be allowed entry anyway.

Meanwhile, Sherrell says he is shocked to hear that he has been refused credit on immigration points for his appointment.

"You might consider me a person without a job at the moment," Sherrell said in a telephone interview from his

Now, Spreading Work Around

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Work sharing is one of the more current methods used to reduce layoffs.

It can take the form of contract provisions whereby employees turn down certain benefits in order to ensure the continued employment of all their colleagues.

This was the case last year when members of the International Typographical workers Union at Pacific Press Ltd. in Vancouver decided to forego a pay raise, give up certain other rights and go to a longer day, shorter work week in order to save jobs.

In Burnaby, another form of work sharing is being tried, this one a program offered by the Canadian Employment and Immigration Commission, formerly known as the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Last year, the commission announced a plan whereby employees could work a four-day week and receive a fifth day's pay at a reduced unemployment insurance rate.

On Jan. 15, Research Industries Ltd., of Burnaby, entered into such an agreement with the commission and its employees in order to prevent the layoff of about 10 of the company's 40 skilled workers.

So now the company shuts down on Monday and the employees take the day off.

Research Industries, which designs and manufactures power equipment as well as sophisticated electronic equipment, is involved in the project on an experimental basis.

The pilot project is one of six across the country. There are two in Ontario, two in Quebec and one in the Maritimes.

Joe Rinaldi, manager of the B.C. and Yukon region's Manpower Consultative Service, emphasized in an interview that the program is at an experimental stage and not being offered to every company. He said he wants to see about six projects in B.C. involving companies of varying sizes.

The following conditions must be met before a company qualifies:

— The firm must be a Canadian company in business at least four years;

— The possibility must exist for the layoff of a significant percentage of the work force;

— The work shortage must be temporary and not caused directly by a labor dispute or for seasonal or cyclical reasons;

— The cause of the layoff must be clearly defined;

— There must be a mutual agreement by the company and union involved.

In this case the union involved is the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 264, and union business agent Bud Morris said the employees are naturally grateful for the government assistance.

★

However, he said, the reason the company was facing the layoffs due to a lack of market for Research Industries' products can be blamed on the federal government for giving grants to other companies who took work away from Research Industries.

"As a desperation sort of move, we have to accept it because there is nothing else we can do," Morris said.

He said when a vote was held among the employees on whether to go on the program, a large majority voted in favor. Those who turned it down did so mostly because they didn't understand the concept, he said.

The program works in the following manner:

If an employee, for example, was making $350 a week, four days work will give him $300 paid by the employer. The weekly unemployment insurance rate for that individual will likely be about $150 and the worker is entitled to 20 per cent of that or $30.

In effect, the worker is getting $20 a week less but saving the jobs of about 10 of his colleagues.

Rinaldi said it is a new concept and represents a shift away from the "I'm-not-my-brothers-keeper" philosophy.

The program calls for a change of attitude by trade unions, imposes a burden on the company in the sense that rather than lay off employees, the company keeps them on and maintains fringe benefits, like dental plans and pensions.

It also calls for a government subsidy which, in cases where possibly a 100 people are involved, could work out to a considerable amount of money, Rinaldi said.

All these factors will be taken into consideration when the commission examines the pilot projects later this year and makes a decision on whether they will be part of a permanent program.

Rinaldi said the commission will participate in the Reasearch Industries project for about 20 weeks. It is expected the company will be back in full swing by May 1, he added.

Ron Johnson, spokesman for the B.C. Federation of Labor, said the labor body views the program as "a stopgap measure."

★

"This kind of bandaiding doesn't accomplish anything," he said.

If Ottawa was using the work-sharing project as a temporary measure prior to some long-term program for combatting unemployment, the federation would be completely in favor, he said.

But if this is the government's only solution, then the federation agrees with the short-term benefits for a few but rejects the concept philosophically because it is not a proper solution to the more serious problem.

Heavy CUPE Attack On Municipal Gang-Up

The B.C. division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) today urged the provincial government to amend labor legislation in order to prevent public sector groups from banding together in bargaining associations.

In a brief to the cabinet, meeting in Esquimalt, the union says the use of such associations will only increase the number of disputes and involve a larger number of workers.

"The relinquishing of public duties by local politicians to an accredited organization is anti-democratic," the brief states.

"Our experience with accredited employers demonstrates that accreditation means polarization and confrontation and the denial of services to members of the community."

The brief was presented to the government as part of a two-day CUPE seminar, which began Monday at The Empress, on the subject of accredited groups being given the authority to handle employer-union matters.

Such accredited groups exist in the Okanagan, the Kootenays and on Vancouver Island with the Mid-Island Public Employers' Association and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, which bargains for area school boards and municipalities.

The CUPE brief says the concept of accreditation began with the construction industry to prevent whipsawing and leapfrogging tactics by trade unions in order to get the best possible contract.

However, there is a considerable difference between the public sector and the construction industry and the accreditation concept was applied to municipalities and school boards without a proper assessment of its impact, the brief says.

CUPE says B.C. is the only province which extends the accreditation principle to the public sector.

The union says by entering into an arrangement with an independent organization and contracting out their responsibilities to a non-elected third party, "politicians are protecting themselves from the public."

High-priced "experts" are hired to represent the association, CUPE says, and the union has found that in most cases these individuals have an anti-union bias and only serve to increase the confrontation between the employees and politicans.

"Employers have sought accreditation basically for one reason — to pit their united strength against union members.

"Accreditation has resulted in widespread, prolonged disruptions which have been exceedingly costly to union members and the community."

SORRY, SPRING LITTLE DELAYED

A mixture of rain and snow reminded Greater Victorians today spring is still a long way off.

The culprit was a ridge of low pressure that brought snow showers down the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Snow at Victoria International Airport cut visibility to one mile but did not affect flying schedules.

Temperatures in Victoria wavered between two and five degrees Celsius and are expected to dip to zero or minus 3 tonight.

The cold snap is expected to continue Wednesday.

Bennett Going On Vacation

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday he won't campaign in the Oak Bay byelection.

Following today's cabinet meeting in Esquimalt, Bennett left for a vacation outside B.C.

Bennett said he will not return until around March 18.

Although he's taking his wife Audrey, the premier called it a working holiday.

He said he will prepare the throne speech to be delivered when the new session of the legislature opens March 30.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Can you tell me what caused the entry of Great Britian into the First World War? D.B.W.

A. A breach of the Quintuple Treaty of 1839. By this treaty the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by the Great Powers after Belgium had revolted from the Netherlands in 1830. Germany violated the treaty by invading Belgium and Britain entered the war.

New Look At Student Suspensions

A high absentee rate, bullying and other disruptive behavior in Greater Victoria schools have led trustees to examine the practice of punishing students by suspending them.

An investigation of the suspension practice has started at the request of the board, school superintendent Allan Stables said.

Bullying is the greatest problem followed by absenteeism, Stables told the board, at a meeting Monday night.

Students are suspended only after every other avenue has been taken, he said.

Trustees are under the "misapprehension" it is the first time for the students who get suspended, Stables said.

"Dozens of hours and massive amounts of school time have gone into dealing with those children," he said.

It is wrong to believe schools can cure all the ills of society, Stables said.

Trustee John Young called student suspensions a "painful destructive practice" and called for a close look at other solutions.

The real problem is in the system, Young said. He suggested the board talk to principals and teachers to improve inadequate programs.

Where schools satisfy the emotional and educational needs of children there are no problems, he said.

Young was supported by Trustee Mary Breer, who said students are having problems rather than being problems.

Meet B.C.'s Bouncy Heart Boy

Danny Greir, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Greir of 890 Burnside Road West, faces his third bout of heart surgery in two months' time.

He's looking forward to it.

The valve operation will be done at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children and for a week before it's scheduled Danny and his family will visit relatives and friends they knew when they lived in Ontario.

Danny was born with a congenital heart defect. Why? This is what B.C. Heart Foundation researchers would like to know. His family is a healthy one. There's nothing wrong with his brother Mark, 15, and his sister Kelly, 17.

Danny has been chosen this year's Heart Boy for the fund-raising campaign which ends March 10.

Meeting him you know why.

He loves to play centre field and pitch with his Little League baseball team. He started to learn golf last year. He enjoys badminton, swimming, skiing, hiking and camping.

He was the top runner at Marigold school until his second operation — open heart surgery at Vancouver General Hospital last spring.

The coming operation, Danny hopes, will once again allow him to take part in track and field events.

Ruth Greir says, except for contact sports, her son's heart condition has never kept him from the athletics he loves so much. He just tries that much harder to be as normal as he can.

Pleased that her son is this year's heart boy, she says: "You don't realize how much work is needed (on research) until it hits home.

"Had he been born even 12 years earlier a lot of this wouldn't have been possible."

Consumers and local businessmen are exhorted to buy Canadian, to support B.C. firms, to help the local economy. But there are limits to patriotism, as Victoria businessman Mike McSorley complained this week to Town Talk.

"It's so expensive to do business here," he said.

He runs Audiotronics Enterprises, a Fort Street supplier of electronic components, and purchases wholesale a large volume of items. Thousands of circuit boards, for example.

"We try to do as much business in B.C., right on the Island, but sometimes we have to go east."

He can purchase the boards in Eastern Canada and have them delivered here, and they are still 20 per cent cheaper than the best quote from a Vancouver supplier.

Another example: his business uses thousands of small cardboard boxes for packing components. McSorley wants to give the business to a supplier in B.C. — which with all the pulp and paper made here should be able to fill the bill — but the best price he can get from the numerous Vancouver manufacturers is 39½ cents per thousand.

A Seattle firm can supply the same 3½-inch-square boxes for 17 cents a thousand, and even with transport costs and the 17½ per cent customs duty, they can be delivered to Victoria for just over half the price quoted in Vancouver.

"It makes it so bloody expensive here," says McSorley. "They (B.C. businessmen) need a good kick in the ass."

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers had just finished telling Victoria city council what a hawker does by legal definition when Mayor Mike Young asked him: "And what does a solicitor do?"

Replied de Villiers without hesitation: "Well it depends on the kind of solicitor — whether it's one who's at bar or just one who frequents them."

In Honolulu, Capt. Cook's bicentennial seems to have had a year's head start, and Victoria visitor Eric McMorran thinks more is being made there of the explorer's voyage than here.

McMorran is back from his annual wintering in a Kauai condominium, clutching a length of cotton shirting published by the Honolulu Advertiser.

This consists of facsimile printing of the paper's front page from last July, which was made up with ancient woodcuts to resemble the period July, 1776, when Cook sailed from Plymouth harbor for the last time.

On Jan. 18 this year, the Advertiser commemorated the 200th anniversary of the discovery of Hawaii (the Sandwich Islands, as Cook called them), putting out bolts of shirting showing H.M.S. Resolution and Cook's landing on Kauai.

For three days last month a special Cook postage stamp drew 10,000 persons to a philatelic gathering at a Honolulu hotel.

"The Americans are making more out this than we are," McMorran said.

Greater Victoria school trustee John Young got caught with his chauvinism showing at a meeting Monday night when, during a heated debate, he made reference to "God Almighty Himself."

"Or herself," crisply replied chairman Susan Brice, making Young apologize for the sexist comment.

King Kootenay

Seventy-five crew members of the Esquimalt-based destroyer HMCS Kootenay, commanded by Cmdr. B.P. Moore, lived the life of a king recently when they visited Nuku Alofa, the capital of Tonga.

They spent the day at the private island of King Taufa Afau Topou IV of Tonga, a highlight being a meal cooked by natives in a jungle clearing 500 yards from the beach.

Small pigs were slaughtered, cleaned and turned slowly over open fires until they were golden brown.

Coconuts, yams, fish, octopuses and other tropical dishes were wrapped in banana leaves and cooked in a pit covered with palm leaves.

Parades are for kids to watch, not take part in.

That's how the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association feels about this year's Victorian Days parade.

The association ruled Monday children under 15 won't be allowed to participate in the annual march and instead a separate parade will be held for them.

A City Hall spokesman said the rule is being introduced because some children have had difficulty finishing the route.

But Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe, who is a member of the celebrations association, said he didn't like the new regulation and will see if he can get the age limit lowered to 12.

"Parades are supposed to be for kids and I doubt if anyone would bother going to a separate parade for children," said Blencoe.

Altogether 600 indignant Victorians walked out of the Bastion production of Comedians during its three-week run at McPherson Playhouse but box office business recorded it as the biggest seller of the season save for Bastion's Christmas show.

Bastion promotion gal Judith Kerr says one reviewer came to see the show having already reviewed three other productions of it and said Victoria's was the best of the four. According to Judith, artistic director Ed Stephenson has no regrets.

Total ticket sales for Comedians amounted to $13,000.

The production, criticized for its coarse language, gave Bastion more Canada-wide coverage than almost anything in the theatre's history.

It also appeared to confirm, according to national news coverage, the impression in other parts of Canada that Victorians are generally a starchy, stiff-necked lot.
